Going Russian
No New Youth for Shaw
Destroying a Great Church
Much Variety in Crime

— By Arthur Brisbane —

RUSSIAN IDEAS, despised until recently, are becoming fashionable. Georgs Bernard Shaw wishes he were 18 and might go to Russia for good.

A former head of our farm board says the small individual must make way for co-operative farming, which is the Russian method.

Nobody may trade in foreign exchange in Germany except through the Reichsbank, at rates fixed by the bank. No one may buy or sell marks except through the Reichsbank. No more "supply and demand" nonsense. If you violate the law you go to jail for 10 years.

In Russia you may buy and sell rubles only through the state bank at par. And you can't take money out of Russia. If you get it there, you must spend it there.

Not so in the United States. We ship money to other countries by the billions, sometimes buying foreign bonds that become worthless, sometimes lending money to fighting nations, always sending rich women abroad to do their shopping.

George Bernard Shaw, back in London, denies that he plans to be "rejuvenated" by Dr. Voronoff of Vienna. You need not be as wise as Shaw to resent the horrible suggestion that the gland of a monkey be planted in your system to enable you to play the part of an old fool right into the grave.

Mr. Shaw, growing more and more enthusiastic about Russia, says the balance of opportunity for the new generation has shifted from Horace Greeley's "Go West" to "Go East, young man, to Russia." Shaw says "Russia is putting her house in order, all the other nations are playing the fool," and he adds: "We had better follow Russia's example as soon as possible."

England will not do it.

Gloomy news from Moscow tells of the Russian government demolishing the great Cathedral of Christ, the Redeemer. A gigantic and magnificent monument, built to honor Russia's victory over Napoleon.

It should be preserved for future generations, whatever use might be made of it, as the Turks piously preserve Saint Sophia, formerly a Christian church, but now a Mohammedan mosque. Russians destroying the magnificent church of marble and granite, that took one hundred years to build, to put in its place a "Palace of Soviets" will regret their vandalism.

You might say something like that about a gangster artist's killings. Their variety is infinite. The latest person put on the spot is found in New York, strangled with a sash cord, left in the street wrapped up in a blanket. Angelo Marino, the man in the blanket, had been trussed up, after strangulation, his knees and arms tied across his chest.

The authorities are no nearer finding gangsters that shot down five children in New York streets, killing one. It is reported that the shooting was a "bookmaker's quarrel," one particular set of bookmakers seeking to discourage with bullets others that gave too long odds to the fools that bet on races.

Bookmakers have money, money buys silence and protection. If it was an affair of bookmakers the criminals will probably not be found.

So many fliers are over the different oceans and continents that it is difficult to keep track of them. Sufficient to say that they are all doing "very nicely." You wonder what the old sultans of Turkey would have said had you told them that in their great city of Istanbul men that had flown the Atlantic ocean and the European continent would land to drink to the health of "Kemal Pasha, President of Turkey." That would be too much for any sultan.

One of the fliers at the Turkish banquet that he expected Constantinople to be a great aviation center some day.

Charles Fourier, the French philosopher, expected Constantinople to become the capital of the entire world, because of its central position.

But now flying machines make all spots on earth accessible. The world's capital will be

'EAGLE' HELD UP BY HEAD WINDS

Forced to Wait at Baker Lake for Fifth Leg of Hop to Hunter Bay

Ottawa, Aug. 4 (AP)—Headwinds all along the course to Hunter Bay held Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh at Baker Lake today, and information received by the Department of Marine indicated they would postpone their departure until tomorrow.

Rumors that Lindbergh had been injured on an attempted takeoff from Baker Lake found no confirmation in messages received by the Department of Marine from the privately owned radio station at Baker Lake. Officials felt confident that they would have been immediately informed had any mishap occurred.

LOST BY STATIC

When the wall of static which had cut them off from the world since shortly after they left Churchill yesterday was broken to permit news of their arrival at Baker Lake to come through it was learned they planned taking off for Hunter Bay, 650 miles to the west, as the fifth hop on their trip.

FACING ARCTIC PERILS

The course from Baker Lake to Hunter Bay, which is just 20 miles from the Arctic Circle, lies over a lake-dotted area far less hospitable than any the Lindberghs have traversed as yet. It will take them over the bleak "height of land," a rising promontory stretching

Unlocks Handcuffs, Flees Police, Slugs Captor and Is Nearly Drowned

A 19-year-old Revere youth, facing trial for auto theft, made a frenzied break for liberty as he was about to be imprisoned at Charles St. jail today.

He picked the lock of handcuffs that shackled him to another prisoner in a police car.

He leaped from the police car, ran through three West End streets and dived into the Charles River basin.

He divested himself of his clothing and swam half-way across the river before a civilian in a row boat captured him.

KNOCKS OUT CAPTOR.

He knocked his captor out with a punch and dived into the river then.

He was pulled out a second time, half-drowned, by Metropolitan police and taken to Massachusetts General Hospital, where a guard was stationed at his bedside.

The prisoner was George Baker of Reservoir ave., Revere. Charged with larceny of an automobile, fruit and auto registration, he was arrested last Thursday with Charles Cammarano, 20, of Wardsworth st., Revere, and George Micaldi, 18, of Leyden st., East Boston.

Cammarano escaped from the cell in East Boston court on Friday and was captured in Revere Saturday. He was handcuffed to Baker when they started for Charles st. jail today after Baker

New Klan Comes to Boston in Big Political Drive

Greater Boston was flooded today with literature boosting the "United Guards of America." This is the latest secret order to appear on the political horizon for the 1932 presidential campaign.

It seeks to recruit men and women who are 100 per cent American, according to its standards. Its origin and motives are veiled with mystery.

The "United Guards of America" calls itself "a pure Protestant, patriotic and fraternal organization for American men and women."

Its advent has stirred interest in political and church circles. It is national in scope, with headquarters in Baltimore.

A footnote directs applicants who have been properly vouched for to mail the $2 initiation fee to P. O. Box 406 in Baltimore.

Some said that the "United Guards of America" is an offshot or subsidiary of the Ku Klux Klan.

Others asserted that it is a rival organization and that it is making no attempt to conceal the fact that it is political, as the hooded order has done.

The claim made by Dr. Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard, in Georgia on Saturday that the Ku Klux Klan in its drive for a larger and more active organization would not meddle in the coming presidential campaign was scoffed at in Boston political circles today.

The "United Guards of America," in its application blanks not only requires applicants for membership to tell what church they attend, but

WIFE DIVORCES VANDERBILT

Reno, Nev., Aug. 4—Mary Weir Vanderbilt was divorced from Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., here today at a private hearing before Judge Benjamin F. Curler. The trial lasted only a few minutes.

Granting of the degree marked a renewal by Vanderbilt of his feud with Peter Arno, New York satirical artist.

"I hold him responsible for what has happened and he has brought upon his own shoulders responsibility for anything that may occur in the future," Vanderbilt declared as he sat at his own home, a mile from the courthouse where Judge Curler signed a decree freeing Mrs. Vanderbilt from marital ties.

Vanderbilt said he had called Mrs. Vanderbilt on the telephone last night and discussed the possibility of a reconciliation.

"I was not successful," he admitted in a voice that betrayed grief.

Details of the alimony agreement said to have been reached were not made known. At the time of the separation it was reported that Mrs. Vanderbilt would ask for $600 a month.

Vanderbilt, socially prominent author, filed suit for divorce, charging cruelty, shortly after his clashes with Arno, asserting he had seen Mrs. Vanderbilt and the artist alight from an automobile. Vanderbilt told the world that he grabbed a revolver and pursued Arno—only to find that the pistol was not loaded.

Arno denied the story.

HEARING ORDERED ON CITY MEAT CONTRACTS

DOWD CLAIMS DOLAN OWNS BEEF FIRM

Councilor Charges Mohawk Co. Has Monopoly of Business and City Loses Money

Public hearing has been ordered by the City Council on the charge of Councilor John F. Dowd of Roxbury that City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan was the owner of a meat firm receiving more than $450,000 in city business the past 18 months.

Treasurer Dolan today declared the Dowd charges as utterly unfounded and stated he has no connection with the Mohawk Packing Company, the firm in question. He said his brother had been connected with a firm of that name until his death in 1923, but this firm was then sold to J. Thomas Butler of Winthrop.

BUTLER CLAIMS FIRM

Butler stated that Councilor Dowd was misinformed as to Dolan's connection with the firm. He declared he has been owner for the past nine years. He added that Dolan was listed as one of the firm's incorporators, but has not been connected with it since its incorporation in 1919.

Councilor Dowd's charges came in a five-hour session of the council last night, and he demanded that Mayor Curley be asked to remove Dolan after asserting the city was paying 25 to 33 per cent above the market price. He asserted inferior meat was being obtained for the Long Island and City hospitals with the result that the city was losing $150,000 on these contracts.

CALLS FOR HEARING

Councilor John I. Fitzgerald stated that the charges were so serious they warranted a public hearing. An order of Councilor Clement Norton to this effect was defeated, but at the end of the session the order was passed.

Councilor Dowd stated that the Mohawk Packing Co. during the Nichols administration received $60,033.37 worth of city business in 1928 and $78,000 in 1929. In the last 18 months the firm has been granted contracts totalling $450,868, Dowd charged.

Councilor Dowd stated that the passing of an order requesting Mayor Curley to direct the superintendent of supplies to allow all large meat concerns to bid for the city's business after declaring that only two other firms were allowed to bid on the City and Long Island Hospital meat contracts. Six other large firms in the city were absolutely ignored, he claimed.

TO BUY IN BOSTON

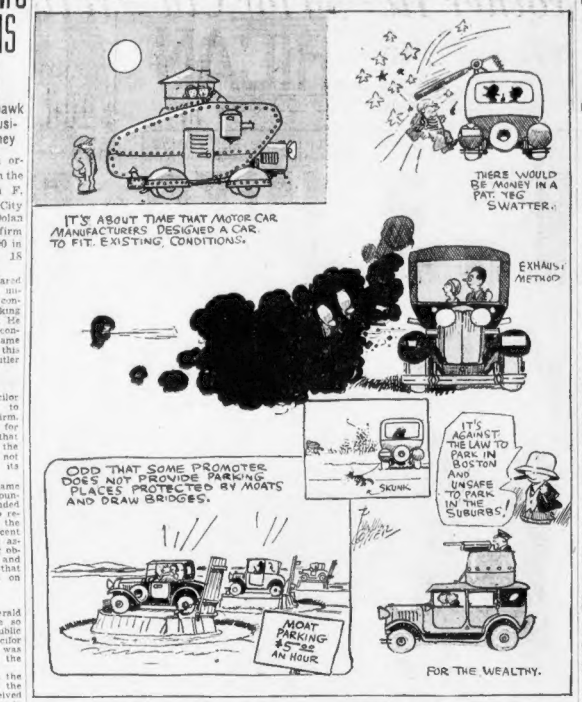

The council also adopted the order suggesting the mayor direct the superintendent to buy all supplies in Boston after Councilor Dowd had remarked it would be preferable to "buy in Boston rather than Chicago."

Dowd contended the city treasurer violated the provisions of the City charter, which requires all city officials to report to the Council their interest in any city contracts. He charged that records in the office of the secretary of state list Dolan as one of the incorporators of the Mohawk company which is receiving the bulk of the city's meat business.

At the city clerk's office records show the firm to be in the ownership of Butler. Dolan's name does not appear in the business certificate.

CHICAGO DEATH RIOT LAID TO COMMUNISTS

Officials Told There Are 30,000 Negro "Reds" in the City; No Race War

Chicago, Aug. 4—Following last night's race riot in which three Negroes were killed, Mayor Cermak ordered a conference of police officials, his cabinet, and leaders of the Negro race, at which it was agreed that there was no antagonism between the races and that the trouble was due solely to Communistic propaganda.

The arrest of Lovett Fortwhiteman, a negro and former student in a Soviet school in Russia, was asked. Meanwhile it was also agreed that Al Moran, bailiff of the municipal court, held up all eviction orders for the present. He said he would establish a special fund to aid evicted families. Corporation Counsel Sexton and other officials said they were surprised when told there were 30,000 to 50,000 Negro Communists in Chicago.

EVICTION STARTS RIOT

The disorder began late yesterday when several hundred Negroes started a demonstration in protest against eviction of a negro family for non-payment of rent.

The crowd showed defiance as two bailiffs started to move the household furnishings to the street. Frightened, the bailiffs telephoned for police. Cries of, "We want something to eat," were heard, and some of the crowd started to put the furniture back.

The bailiffs and police, who arrived on the scene were surrounded by rioters, many of whom were armed with knives, clubs and pistols. One of the officers suffered a skull fracture. Several others were cut.

When police reserves, including Sergt. Henry Lyons, arrived, a Negro pulled Lyons' pistol from his holster and threatened to shoot.

POLICE SHOOT TWO

Policeman William Jordan fired and the Negro fell dead. A few minutes later Lyons, who had recovered his pistol, reciprocated by killing a Negro who was firing at Jordan from a nearby doorway.

The manner of the third man's death was not learned.

At the present season, however, the dangers of crossing the height of land are minimized. The whining gales sweeping across the barrens in winter, which have set back ski-fitted planes in attempts to pierce through to the Arctic shore, will not have to be encountered. Reports from the territories indicate that admirable weather prevails.

MAY SPEED TRIP

From Hunter Bay, Col. Lindbergh plans the short 275-mile hop over Lake Step to Port Norman on the Mackenzie river, leaving only a 350-mile-down-river flight before Aklavik, on the Mackenzie river delta at the Arctic shore, is reached. Once the Lindberghs make Hunter Bay, it is possible they may decide to make the two hops to Aklavik—a total of 625 miles—in a single day.

The Murkey Limited, steaming south along the Hudson Bay Railway from Churchill today carried three bulging mail sacks indicative of the flurry caused by the Lindberghs' stay here over Sunday night.

LADY DAVIS TO WED BRITON IN 3D ROMANCE

Eric Loder, Kin of Irish Peer, Wins Love of Capitalist's Rich Widow

Eric Loder, British racing car driver, grandson of an Irish peer, has emerged victorious from the mad two-year scramble for the hand and heart of Lady Eleanor Davis, well known in Boston.

Since the death of Sir Mortimer B. Davis, Canadian capitalist, left her a $50,000,000 widow, Lady Eleanor has been virtually surrounded by suitors.

WINS OVER RIVALS

The former Eleanor Curran, divorced bride of Count Moroni of Bristol, R. I., will shortly become the wife of Loder, former husband of Gabrielle Ray, actress, according to reports received today from Cannes, France, where she has just opened her villa.

Loder, who raced at Indianapolis before the war in British cars, apparently has put to flight the Baron Maurice de Rothschild of the famous London banking family and Camillo Aldao, Argentine distiller, one-time fiance of Mabel Boll and the "best dressed man in Paris."

This pair, with Loder, have been attentive to the beautiful widow since the summer of 1928.

As Eleanor Curran, Lady Eleanor was manicurist, chorus girl, telegraph operator and waitress in a New Orleans restaurant before she met and married Count Giralamo Moroni.

DIVORCES COUNT

Samuel C. Colt, aged Rhode Island and rubber magnate and banker, sent regret Moroni to the Orient in 1922 and installed his wife in a cottage on his estate in Bristol.

She became hostess at all his social functions and when he died he left her $50,000.

A year after Colt's death Countess Moroni won a divorce decree at Bristol. In 1926 she married Sir Mortimer Davis, who had been divorced by the first Lady Davis.

"Morty" Davis, Jr., all-round playboy, incurred the displeasure of his father by marrying Roszika Dolly, of the famous Dolly sisters. The new Lady Davis frowned on the marriage and refused to receive Roszika at her Cannes villa.

IT'S BIG DAY IN COAST GUARD

Wherever navigable waters touch the possessions of the United States, the United States Coast Guards, those versatile men of the sea, are celebrating th 141st birthday of their service today.

From Hawaii to Alaska, and up the Atlantic and in all intermediate coastal territories, the stations of the service are decked with flags, celebrations are under way, and every available man is released from duty for the day.

At Base 5, East Boston, fully half the 365 guards who man the station under the command of Lt.-Commander Earl G. Rose were given shore leave. In the harbor 15 of the 23 patrolboats assigned to the base were moored, with lines of pennants and streamers floating from their masts.

The coast guard was founded in 1790 by Alexander Hamilton, first secretary of the treasury, when the smuggling of rum and slaves from the West Indies presented a serious menace to the infant nation's tax revenues.

From the comparatively simple duties the service has grown to a far-flung police force and a safeguard to life and property which covers the entire coastline of domestic and territorial United States.

In 1915 the revenue cutter service, as the early coast guard was called, was merged with the life saving service. Since that time the Coast Guard has been charged with the responsibility for such widely variant tasks as the ice patrol, fighting forest fires along the coast, rescue of vessels and lives at sea, enforcement of prohibition, protection of the sealing trade, prevention of smuggling of aliens and commodities, and a hundred other details.

In the service are more than 12,000 enlisted men and 300 officers.

They found him alone in his back yard playing with the money which was scattered about the ground. The boy's father said he would make restitution for any shortage.

St. Louis, Aug. 4 (AP)—Authorities today were convinced that two men who yesterday beat and robbed Oscar Johnson, 2d, 26, son of a founder of the International Shoe Company, intended to kidnap him and released him only because they became alarmed at the vigorous resistance he offered.

Physicians said Johnson had suffered severe gashes on the head and face, three broken teeth and appeared to be suffering from shock.

Two men, Felix McDonald and John Davitt, were held in jail at Clayton. Sheriff Lill said Johnson identified McDonald as one of his assailants, but was not certain about Davitt.

Johnson had just left his mother's 7000-acre estate when two men, one armed with a sawed-off shotgun and the other with a revolver, commanded him to stop.

The men forced Johnson to reenter the car, one took the wheel and started the car. Finally Johnson smashed the dashboard with his foot, disabling the ignition system, forcing the car to stop. In a fight that followed Johnson was dragged into a cornfield and robbed of about $70.

COL. HOUSE 50 YEARS WED

Manchester-by-the-Sea, Aug. 4 (INS)—A golden wedding anniversary was observed quietly today by Col. and Mrs. Edward M. House.

A family dinner was attended by their two daughters, Mrs. Randolph Tucker, of Brookline, and Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss, of New York, at the home in Magnolia.

"It is a great privilege to have lived a happy wedded life for 50 years," said Col. House. "It is nice to be remembered by my friends, and we both appreciate their thoughtfulness, but neither of us is young any longer and we must restrain our enthusiasm, much as we should like to entertain them."

Col. House is 73 years old. Mrs. House was Miss Louise Hunter. Their marriage united two of the most influential families in Texas.

Chancellor Bruening was expected to make this announcement in a radio speech tonight to be broadcast throughout Europe and followed by an English translation for a hookup with the United States.

'POLICE OF THE SEA' PUT ON GALA GARB FOR BIRTHDAY

This is the Coast Guard's birthday and it is celebrating. The service is 144 years old and carries its age remarkably well, being hale and spry and destined, no doubt, to reach a ripe old age. At Base 5, East Boston, the fleet is at anchor, all decked out in flags. Photo shows the flotilla with the customs house tower standing straight and tall in the distance. (Staff photo.)

The navy announces that it is now building a plane that will be "as speedy as the British 'Interceptor.'"

Why a plane "as fast?" Why not FASTER?

In the days of Paul Jones, we sometimes had ships on the sea faster than the British had. Why not have them faster in the air?

However, as David Rendt, the Tammany boss of Staten Island, remarked, "In the old days we had wooden ships and iron men. Now we have iron ships and wooden men."

NAVY WON'T BAN CIGAR BUYING

An indignant Boston cigar manufacturer has protested, without avail, against the purchase of large stocks of Havana cigars in Cuba by the United States navy and its sailors.

The Boston manufacturer wrote John H. Duys, president of the Associated Cigar Manufacturers in New York, and complained because the crews of naval ships at Charlestown, who had been among his best customers, weren't buying his product any more.

He said there was a stock of 30,000 Cuban cigars in the commissaries of the ships.

Duys forwarded the letter to the Navy department and today received a reply from Acting Paymaster-General Pyne who said there was no rule to prohibit naval vessels from obtaining cigars or anything else in foreign ports.

WHOSE BUNGALOW IS IT?

MRS. MILDRED MARSHALL

MRS. BEATRICE MORRISON RALPH PIERCE, Witness

Mrs. Dorothy Hannon of Lynn has it, and Dr. James C. Rowley, a physician, says it belongs to him. She was his housekeeper and claims it as a gift. The case was to be heard today, but was postponed a week. Witnesses for the defense include Mrs. Beatrice Morrison, Mrs. Hannon, Mrs. Mildred Marshall and Ralph Pierce. (Staff photo.)

Further hearings in the Lynn "bungalow suit" brought by Dr. James C. Rowley, middle-age physician, against his attractive former housekeeper, Mrs. Dorothy Hannon, were postponed today because of the illness of Edward Coughlin, the physician's attorney.

Dr. Rowley seeks to recover the $8000 bungalow now occupied by Mrs. Hannon in defiance of his claim of ownership. Also involved in the suit in equity is $331 which Dr. Rowley says Mrs. Hannon took from him.

When the hearings reopen a week from today Mrs. Beatrice Morrison, Mrs. Hannon's sister, and Mrs. Mildred Marshall, who now occupies the disputed bungalow with Mrs. Hannon, will return to the stand as witnesses.

At a previous session Mrs. Marshall testified that the physician, now bedridden in his Broad st. apartment, had told her repeatedly that he had built the bungalow as a gift to Mrs. Hannon.

The litigation has reconciled the doctor and his wife, estranged from him for seven years. She is now at his bedside.

DIES TRYING TO TELEPHONE FOR DOCTOR

Newton Youth Feared He Must Quit School for Financial Reasons

Overwork, and fear that his studies must be abandoned for financial reasons, caused John E. Thompson, 19, Tech junior, to swallow poison at his home, 26 Alderwood rd., Newton, it was learned today.

According to officials the youth became unbalanced through overstudy and worry, drank the poison in his chemical laboratory in the cellar of his home, and died while trying to call a doctor, after retching.

Dr. T. Morton Gallagher, medical examiner, pronounced the case a suicide and said he would not perform an autopsy.

Young Thompson's father was killed in an auto accident some years ago.

The youth mixed the poison with lemonade and drank it, but apparently regretted his act almost immediately. He staggered to the telephone, apparently to summon medical aid, and was discovered mumbling into the transmitter by his sister.

She rushed to a corner drug store and telephoned Dr. Frank Clark. In the meantime a telephone operator, hearing the boy's meaningless muttering and distinguishing the word "poison," notified police and a detail of officers rushed to the house.

They found the boy dead, the telephone still grasped in his hands.

The sister stated the dead boy's mother, Mrs. Jean C. Urban, was vacationing in Biddeford, Me. She is the divorced wife of Bertram Urban, a leather merchant.

'SIS HAS MILLION: LIFE'S MY FORTUNE'

POOR BUT JOYOUS

Eddie Scanlon, the brother of Editha Pierce, whose adoption made her a millionairess, gets all the fun out of life there is in it—and he isn't envious at all of Editha's fortune. He hasn't seen her in 13 years—since they were the children of a waiter with only dreams for riches.

LIFE IN THE OPEN HIS HOBBY

Eddie Scanlon leveling the baseball diamond on Lincoln Hill, the boys' camp at Foxboro, where he is spending his vacation. He is glad his sister is rich and hopes she is happy, but—well, the bumps 'round third base should be leveled. The photos were made by a Boston Evening American staff photographer today at Foxboro.

HE FINDS JOY IN OUTDOOR PASTIMES

Cinderella may have her castle and gold, but her 16-year-old brother, Eddie, is content with three squares a day, a couple of pals and an ol' swimmin' hole.

PARTED 13 YEARS

Thirteen years have passed since Eddie last saw his sister, Editha. It was in 1918 that Mrs. Adelaide Pierce, wife of the radiator millionaire, John Bartlett Pierce, went into an orphanage and adopted the daughter of a Boston waiter.

Editha then took the name of Pierce but Eddie and his 21-year-old sister, Violet, retained their family name, Scanlon, after they went to live with Mrs. Agnes Smith in Marshfield. They have always called her mother. She is the mother of Mrs. Ethel Marsh, housekeeper at "The Acres," the Pierce-Davis estate in West Peabody and Lynnfield.

It is this estate which Editha inherited in addition to the Pierce millions through the will of her foster parent, who drowned June 30 in Lake Suntaug.

Only a few miles separated the three children but during all those years Violet and Eddie never had a glimpse of Editha. No letter or Christmas card ever found its way from the Cinderella girl to the Marshfield home.

KNOWS IS LOVE

"Of course," said Eddie loyally, she was pretty busy I guess, going to school and all that. Probably she didn't have time and besides Mrs. Davis used to write to Violet once in a while."

Eddie managed to find a little time to talk about his sister's good fortune. Some of the gang at the boys' camp in Foxboro were playing ball before a swim and Eddie, as junior counselor, was anxious to rejoin them.

"Yup," he said hurriedly, "I read about that in the papers. Gee, that's a lot of money isn't it. Do you want to look around the camp? We've got a swell place here and swell fellows. Ninety of 'em.

"Whuzzat? Oh, yes. I saw the

Friend in Need

MALONEY QUITS WELFARE POST

In a surprise move, James P. Maloney, "best friend" of Boston's needy, and treasurer of the Overseers of the Public Welfare, resigned that post today to take effect as soon as a successor is named.

Although Maloney, a retired cotton broker and a director in many corporations, gave demand of private business interests as the reason for his stepping down, it is understood at City Hall that the public welfare treasurer has wearied of attempting to get cooperation in his department.

A man of comfortable circumstances, Maloney, in innumerable cases, has aided Boston's poor unofficially and beyond the aid which they could secure through the public welfare board.

Since taking the position at opening of the present Curley administration, he has expended many hundreds of dollars of his own money in bestowing Christmas on poor children and discouraged mothers who receive from the city barely enough for absolute necessities.

He has been a constant visitor at hospitals when some of the city's dependents have been ill and without friends.

EDISON ON ROAD TO RECOVERY

West Orange, N. J., Aug. 4 (AP)—Thomas A. Edison was believed today definitely on the road to recovery from the sudden collapse he suffered Saturday.

After breakfast today, he inquired of his son, Charles, about business problems.

Dr. Hubert S. Howe issued the following bulletin:

"Mr. Edison slept eight hours and had the best night so far. He ate his breakfast with relish, read the morning papers and showed evidence of returning strength and health."

Charles Edison said his father was in the best spirits since his illness and that Mrs. Edison had kept an almost constant vigil at her husband's bedside. Because of the improved condition Mrs. Edison would leave for a while today for a walk, the son said.

A noon bulletin said: "There has been no change in Mr. Edison's condition this morning."

Charles Edison said his father was fully dressed and spent considerable time in the living room adjoining his second floor bedroom.

Fort Myers, Fla., Aug. 4 (AP)—Prayers have been offered here since Sunday for the speedy recovery of Thomas A. Edison.

GREEN WARNS OF IDLE PERIL

New Bedford, Aug. 4—"An unemployed man is a menace to the community, and with 6,000,000 unemployed in this country, the menace is magnified 6,000,000 times," declared President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, speaking today at the 48th annual convention of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor at the second session of its four-day stay here.

Calling upon President Hoover to hold an immediate conference of financiers, economists and labor representatives for the purpose of discussing and remedying unemployment, President Green said:

"Unless the government increases its construction of public works to absorb the unemployed, there is a danger that the economic structure of this country will be overthrown. If that structure is overthrown, something much worse will be substituted."

President Green also said that employers throughout the country should assure their workers that they were not going to be laid off, stating that this action would release a large amount of money, which workers, fearful of being laid off, have placed in savings banks.

"We are coming to sorry times when the granaries of the country are full while people are starving," added Green.

SANDINO HOLDS 2 U. S. FLIERS

Colon, Panama, Aug. 4 (INS)—Escaping death when their plane was shot from under them by followers of the Nicaraguan bandit leader, Augustino Sandino, two United States Marine Corps fliers were held prisoner by the rebels today, according to word received here.

The airmen are a pilot named Herita and his mechanic, Simmons. Their plane crashed under heavy bandit fire on the Wawa river near Puerto Cabezas, scene of recent rebel activity, last Wednesday.

As soon as news of the crash reached marine corps headquarters, a relief party was hastily organized to free the captured airmen.

Four New England governors met behind closed doors at the State House today to hear the report of a committee chosen to protect New England's railroad interest in the proposed consolidation of eastern roads.

Members of the railroad committee present were David Howie of Boston, Edward E. Chase of Portland, James B. Dewey of Quechee, Vt., E. Kent Hubbard of Middleton, Ct., and George L. Crocker of Providence.

They were appointed to intervene in President Hoover's proposal to consolidate eastern railroads outside of New England with either the Baltimore & Ohio, New York Central, Pennsylvania or Chesapeake & Ohio Nickel Plate.

19 DROWNED IN TRUCK PLUNGE

Georgetown, S. C., Aug. 4 (AP)—A truck in which 19 persons, all except two of them Negroes, were trapped and drowned when it plunged through an open draw bridge here, was partly raised about daylight today and one body was recovered.

All of those drowned were from Andrews, S. C.

The two white men who drowned were Warren Newton, owner and driver of the bus, and Otis Newton, his son.

Authorities said they were at loss to explain what caused the driver to run the bus into the river. They said red light danger signals to warn that the drawbridge had been lifted for the passage of a boat were clearly visible.

Woman's Leg Broken by Officer's Hurtling Body

When Mrs. Emma Olsen, 73, of 156 Spencer ave., Chelsea, became confused while crossing the street and ran directly in the path of his machine today, Motorcycle Officer John Pike risked serious injury to himself in trying to prevent an accident.

He twisted the front wheel, throwing the cycle. The sudden stop sent him headlong over the handlebar, and his flying body struck the aged woman, knocking her to the ground.

GIRL, MAN, HELD IN CHECK CASES

Louis A. Sweetland, former Arlington tax collector, and alleged forger, and Miss Mary V. Lemieux, charged for a bad check ring said to be headed by Sweetland, pleaded not guilty to five counts of uttering worthless checks, in superior court today.

Although Sweetland, arraigned alone on counts in charge of forgery, pleaded not guilty, his pretty companion took guilty pleas on three worthless check charges, aggregating $210, on which she was arraigned separately.

Sweetland and Miss Lemieux were returned to Charles St. jail following the court appearance, to await arraignment on numerous other worthless check charges. There are outstanding against Sweetland 19 charges of larceny, 18 of forgery and 18 of uttering worthless checks.

$240 ICE CREAM KELLY'S AGAIN

It's been melted a long time, but still lingered today the flavor of a consignment of ice cream—$240 worth, in three shades—delivered last Fourth of July to the youngsters of Ward 13, Dorchester.

It lingered because today Mayor Curley returned to the City Council an order passed July 13, requesting that the city pay the ice cream bill. The Mayor maintains that City Councillor Francis E. Kelly should pay it.

City Treasurer Dolan cancelled the Quincy order in the interest of trading at home, and ordered from a Boston dealer. Both orders were delivered, however, and the city paid the Boston bill.

MISSING BOY, 14 IN LOVE CHASE

Provincetown, Aug. 4—Alan Gordon Hearn, 14, who disappeared from the Summer home of his parents here Sunday, followed the call of love to Westfield, N. J.

The young woman he selected for his "dream girl," notified his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hearn of Washington, Ct., that he was being cared for by her family.

Yesterday Hearn's parents were told he had arrived at their home in Washington, Ct., obtained $5 and again disappeared.

WING FALLS OFF; 2 FLIERS DIE

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 4 (AP)—Harold Brannick of Armont, N. Y., and Stuart Marcotte of Derbyline were killed as their airplane crashed today.

The fliers had just taken off from a field here and had reached a height of 200 feet when the accident occurred.

Witnesses said the plane started a dive and its left wing fell off. The plane crashed to the ground and buried its nose in a swamp back of the field.

HOT WAVE BACK; WIND ROUTS HUMIDITY

Midsummer heat descended upon Boston again today as the northerly breezes which refreshed the city in the wake of last night's turbulent electrical storm died out.

At 1:45 the temperature had climbed to 83, four degrees higher than yesterday's figure at that hour. The discomfort of the heat was considerably lessened by a drop in humidity from 88 yesterday to 38 today.

Today's temperature was expected to equal, if not exceed, yesterday's maximum of 89, the weather man said.

The storm which arose suddenly early last evening resulted in three deaths in Massachusetts.

The only injury reported in Boston as a result of the storm was that incurred by Ralph Bettencourt, 16, of 1409 Commonwealth ave., Brighton, who suffered a lacerated scalp when the auto in which he was riding was struck by a falling limb. He is being treated at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Two men and two boys were rescued off Castle Island by a lobsterman after their sailboat had collapsed in the height of the storm last night. They were Richard Welsh, 35, of Chelsea, and Fred Marshall, 30. Henry Ferrini, 12, and John Gevini, 7, all of East Boston.

Everett, Brookline, Malden, Dedham, Framingham, Arlington and many other cities and towns in and around Greater Boston suffered heavy tree damage as the high wind tore limbs from the trees and swept them to the street.

The Northern Berkshires and the southern part of Vermont were hit by the most severe electrical storm in years. In one section of North Adams a foot and one-half of water flooded the streets. Two buildings were struck by lightning and trees and wires were blown down by the high wind.

Dover and Keene, N. H., both reported the worst storm in years striking there. Twelve buildings were struck in Dover, one, the home of Peter Robins, in Middle rd., burning down after being struck. Hundreds of telephones were reported out of order.

N. E. LEADERS LAUD HEARST CRIME WAR

Praise and support for William Randolph Hearst's editorial demanding action by President Hoover, Congress and the states to end racketeering, gang murder and lawlessness in the United States continued to be given by leaders in Massachusetts.

Mayor James M. Curley said that both of Mr. Hearst's recent projects—the advocation of a $5,000,000,000 construction program for relief of unemployment, and the calling upon the President to assume the leadership in the movement to end racketeering—warrant the calling of a special session of Congress.

U. S. Senator Walsh said Mr. Hearst's editorial presents the subject in a vigorous manner and that it is one that should be given immediate consideration.

MAYOR CURLEY'S VIEWS

Comments on the editorial follow:

MAYOR CURLEY—The American public owes a debt of gratitude to William Randolph Hearst and his publications, not only for his past recommendations as to policies, but for his two most recent contributions, namely, a program for the restoration of prosperity in America and a demand for federal action to end racketeering.

Federal organizations interested in the public weal have declared within the last 10 days that the winter of 1931 and 1932 will witness greater unemployment and more suffering than experienced since 1873. As a panacea, Mr. Hearst advocates a $5,000,000,000 construction program, and unless the program advocated by the Hearst publications or one of equal magnitude, is undertaken there is little likelihood for the firing of the imagination of the American people and the ending of the psychology of fear which has possessed them for more than a year.

ISSUE VITAL TO U. S.

The second and more recent project advocated by Mr. Hearst, namely, that the President assume leadership in the movement to end racketeering, is vital to every citizen of the United States. Either project, it would appear, represents sufficient warrant for the calling of a special session of Congress with a message from the President of the United States in favor of an amendment to the Volstead act, to pave the way for the restoration of orderly procedure in every portion of the United States.

Racketeering was unknown in America prior to the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. The wholesale and brutal disregard for human life which has characterized the operations of gangsters and racketeers in the last year, plus the corruption of public officials and law enforcing officers through the immense profits derived from the manufacture and sale of poisonous liquor, would speedily end, provided the law was liberalized and the manufacture, sale and distribution of alcoholic beverages are legalized.

SLAUGHTER OF CHILDREN

The short session of Congress, which convenes in December and which inevitably suspends activities during the Christmas and New Year's season, gives little promise of early action.

The slaughter of innocent children upon the streets of New York during the last week, and the daily killing of citizens in every section of the country as a part of a program of gangsters and racketeer warfare, may reasonably be expected to continue until such time as the law has been amended. Even after the law has been amended the probability is that a period of five years may elapse before old-fashioned honesty removes corruption among law enforcing officials, while a failure to act speedily may mean a turning over of the control of all law enforcing agencies to the enemies of American institutions, namely, the gangsters and racketeers.

The announcement of Mr. Hearst merits serious thought, and I trust will receive early consideration by President Hoover.

WALSH URGES ACTION

U. S. SENATOR WALSH—It is the first time that the crime wave has been presented in such a vigorous manner as it has by Mr. Hearst in his editorial. The subject is one that should be given immediate, most thoughtful and active consideration. The federal government should proceed within its constitutional limitations to co-operate in every possible way to end the sway of the gangster and the racketeer which is threatening the safety and prestige of our people.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN W. McCORMACK—Mr. Hearst's editorial conveys potently the dangers which have come from prohibition legislation. The 18th amendment to the Constitution has brought about more evil and more dangerous conditions than those who supported its passage desired and tried to eliminate. There exists today throughout the United States organized elements who will stop at no crime in trying to remove competition.

Not only has it brought about a general condition of disrespect, but it has brought about a tremendous increase in the cost of government, amounting to $800,000,000 a year, which the taxpayers have to bear. The repeal of the 18th amendment would eliminate the source from which this lawlessness comes, and would bring into existence a new industry which would reabsorb at least 750,000 workers who have been displaced by the substitution of machinery, and would also remove from the shoulders of the taxpayers the burden of raising for national, state and city governments at least $800,000,000 a year.

It is a very powerful and truthful editorial and applicable to present conditions.

AGED WOMAN FIRE VICTIM IN PEPPERILL

Pepperill, Aug. 4—An 86-year-old crippled woman was burned to death, and her daughter was seriously burned, while their home and barn was destroyed when an oil lamp exploded in the home of Mrs. Eleanor Colson of Shipley Hill, in the outskirts of this town, early today.

Mrs. Colson was fatally burned and her daughter, Miss Bertha Colson, 58, was so seriously seared about the head, face and hands that she is in a critical condition at the home of friends here, where she was taken after the fire.

The damage was estimated at $10,000.

The Colson home and a small barn in the rear were razed by the flames which followed the explosion. According to police and nearby residents who rushed to the scene the aged woman and her daughter were preparing to retire when an oil lamp in the kitchen exploded, igniting Mrs. Colson's clothing. Her daughter was burned in attempting to extinguish the blaze. Mrs. Colson's escape was cut off when the flames rapidly spread throughout the house.

CIGARETTE TAX BOOST FAVORED

Washington, Aug. 4 (INS)—Economists of the Hoover administration, studying methods to increase revenue, were reported today as favoring a boost in the excise tax on cigarettes.

The present tax of $3 a thousand is bringing in about $359,000,000 a year revenue. An increase of $2 a thousand, it is calculated, would bring $225,000,000 more to help meet the national deficit of more than $900,000,000.

The action of manufacturers in increasing the wholesale price as food, clothing and farm prices slumped, was said to have centered government attention on the subject. If the manufacturers can raise prices when labor costs and tobacco values have declined, then the trade can stand a higher tax, it is argued.

JAP RETURNS $100,000 GIFT

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP)—Jesse S. Shima, Japanese secretary to the late Mrs. Mary F. Henderson, today relinquished title to the $100,000 Nicaraguan legation she conveyed to him in 1930 for $100.

Shima deeded the property to George E. Edelin, trustee for the estate.

Shima said he had accepted the property at the insistence of Mrs. Henderson but never meant to keep it.

He was left $100,000 cash and $200,000 in trust in the last of six wills made by the widow of the late John B. Henderson, former senator from Missouri.

LEAGUE FIZZLES IN BIG CRISIS, SAYS LODGE

Williamstown, Aug. 4 (AP)—"The League of Nations is a complete fadeout in the present world crisis. The fact that the league did nothing in the recent German crisis was not even news," Henry Cabot Lodge, grandson of the late senator, told the Institute of Politics here.

"Our experiments in chemical warfare at Edgewood Arsenal are being watched with fear and suspicion the world over," Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, associate secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, said.

"Good-will tours to Europe of mayors and aviators accomplish nothing," Admiral W. L. Rodgers, U. S. N., said.

"A study of 63 leading American newspapers conducted by the University of Missouri indicated that from 1900 to 1923 space given to political news had increased only 1 per cent, foreign news 9 per cent, while sports space had gone up 44 per cent, crime news 58 per cent and illustrations 84 per cent," Stanley High, editor of the Christian Herald, declared.

The Kellogg-Briand peace pact outlawing war as a means of settling disputes between nations was described by James Oliver Murdock as "the corner-stone of a new international social order."

The assistant solicitor of the State Department told the Institute "the great social significance of the pact is that it has effected a turn in the tide of world affairs away from war toward international peace."

Family Camps Out Near Costly Home in Eviction Row

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 4 (AP)—The Lawson family clung to its rights today—legal or extra legal—while police looked on with concern.

The three members of the family are encamped in a street beside the home in the fashionable Los Feliz district, from which they were evicted last Wednesday as the result of a foreclosure.

Mrs. Ethel V. Lawson, bedridden, said she wanted to stay as close of the property "as I can until I can try to get it back again." The other campers are her husband and her aged mother, Mrs. H. B. Brownlow, a schoolteacher from Yuma.

Concord, N. H., Aug. 4 (AP)—United States Senator George H. Moses announced today he would seek a fourth term. He made it plain that the vice-presidency held no attractions for him.

WORLD FLIERS SET TO GO ON

Tokio, Aug. 4 (AP)—Contrary to reports in New York that they had abandoned their round-the-world flight in quest of the record that Wally Post and Harold Gatty set recently, Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn awaited only favorable weather reports at Khabarovsk, Siberia, today, to start the hazardous jump to Nome, Alaska.

Possibility that Herndon and Pangborn would even equal the record set by Post and Gatty waned as the delay at Khabarovsk continued. At 9 p. m. (7 a. m. E.S.T.) today, Herndon and Pangborn were 29 hours, 16 minutes behind Post and Gatty, who landed in New York 8 days, 15 hours and 51 minutes.

THE LOVES OF CHARLIE CHAPLIN

King of Laughs and World's Unluckiest Lover

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Charlie Chaplin almost missed a train, in London, so much in love was he with Marie Doro (above), English star. They met in London music hall where both were playing the same vaudeville bill. Later they met in New York and Charlie renewed his love-making efforts. This love was the second most beautiful affair of the filmster's life, he often remarked. She is shown in British play and also in photograph taken several years ago as a Lasky star on Broadway. (Photo by Ira Hill.)

(Love, bitter and sweet, have marked the love-life of Charlie Chaplin, self-styled "Profound Ironist." His life, tragically romantic, is unparalleled in the Hollywood film colony. He has had many loves and romances, but unlucky Charlie has always remained alone. The first and only love of his life, the love of his boyhood, is told in detail in today's Boston American.)

CHAPTER 2—FIRST LOVE WAS HIS LAST

The love that Charlie Chaplin will take to the grave with him, the only love of his life, is the love he bore Hetty Kelley.

For all the beautiful and gorgeous women that the film's funny man has had, for all the sensational romances he has enjoyed with some of them, only Hetty occupies the inner recess of his heart.

And there, tucked away as the choicest of memories, is the love affair he had with the sister of an old stage colleague.

It was only a boy and girl affair, as was 10 and she was a year younger. But it was Charlie's first love affair. It was Charlie's first walk along happiness' road, with a pretty, smiling, big blue-eyed girl by his side, confident of his ability, because of his future success.

LOVE OF BOYHOOD

It was the love of his boyhood when he stood on the threshold of life clamoring for an audience.

And now Charlie's memory will never be erased. Kensington Gate, London, where he met the girl of his youthful dreams and there with the stage-land planned.

Then, while his parents were playing in the London music halls and reared in the theatrical atmosphere, it was only natural that Charlie should meet and fall in love with a sister of a vaudevillian.

He was Sonny's sister, and with Sonny Charlie worked many a Lonesome theater bill.

Charlie was in love.

And when he wasn't capering on the stage of a London theater as a member of a group of juvenile dancers known as the Eight Lancashire Lads, he was keeping this tryst with Hetty at Kennington Gate.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the young would meet. Charlie dressed to the nines eagerly watching the trolleys for sight of his Hetty alighting.

Those were happy days for Charlie. They were days when joy and happiness were actual, tangible things. He had only a little, but he had Hetty to share the little with him and everything seemed all right with the world.

But success was fast coming to the comedian. He scored a tremendous hit as the page boy, Billy, of "Sherlock Holmes," and his future became assured as a pantomimist and comedian.

Charlie turned to America. He was advised to seek his opportunities across the water. He was told that if he made good in America, he would reap the fortune of his efforts. He would become rich.

The poverty to which his mother had been subjected following the death of Charlie's father, a character actor, the boy never forgot. His dreams took him to this country. He wanted to restore his mother to comforts and easy living.

And he said good-bye to Hetty. He told her he would be back when fame and acclaim was his.

Charlie would have married Hetty and taken her with him, but his mother advised against it. He was too young.

Charlie, a devoted son, acquiesced to her wishes. He left alone.

When he climbed down the gangplank at New York for his first American appearance in 1910, little attention was paid to his sad face. But, and long afterwards

MAURICE CHEVALIER GIVEN SONG WRITER ROLE

Star to Start Work on 'One Hour With You' Early in October

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 4—There wasn't a dissenting vote in the Paramount conference when it was decided to star Maurice Chevalier in "One Hour With You." The title did the trick.

There were loud cheers and applause.

Louella O. Parsons

This picture will supersede all others and it will be put into production October 3. Chevalier would rather make pictures in New York but this time he will have to bow to the command of the studio and come to Hollywood.

Ernst Lubitsch will supervise the picture and that means he will practically direct it. The combination of Chevalier and Lubitsch in "The Smiling Lieutenant" and "The Love Parade" has meant money in the box office.

Chevalier plays a song writer and the story has something of the stage, something of society and of course, plenty of romance with some original songs. It wouldn't surprise me to see Ona Munson go into the picture as one of the leads.

* * *

The race between Robert Montgomery and Clark Gable is neck and neck so far as the fans are concerned. The Gable supporters say Clark is a shade ahead, while Bob's fans claim he has the lead. Well, whichever way it is, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plans to give these boys a special break in pictures. Bob is starting "A Family Affair" immediately with Jack Conway directing. Albert Richard Wetjen is the author. Little Leila Hyams will have to leave Malibu to take her place as Bob's leading lady. She played opposite him in his earlier pictures but since that time she has been in most of the Jack Gilbert dramas. Leila has an attractive home at Malibu. Billy Haines is being given credit for doing the interior decorating.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Thrilling pictures of the start of the first transatlantic air race are presented in sight and sound in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News with graphic description by the Globe Trotter.

The participants in the strange race, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Russell Boardman and John Polando, are shown as they receive the good wishes of Dr. Kimball, the U. S. weather expert, at Floyd Bennett Field in Brooklyn.

New Yorkers react to the intense heat is vividly shown. There are glimpses of the millionaire who finds no comfort, as well as other resorts; and scenes in the tenement districts where the people gasp for breath.

Radio Stars at Scollay

The Radio Minstrels head the seven-act variety bill at the Scollay this week. Their offering stops the show, yet a close second is the act of clever Jimmy Lucas and his charming partner-in-fun, Evalyn Herbert.

The show starts off in fairly fast style with three girls who choose to call themselves "Sweethearts of Rhythm." Their dancing went over big. Janis and Derex, in a comedy offering, is next and get by nicely; followed by a hilarious sketch featuring Nat "Chick" Haines, who has assembled a company of dancers and comedians who are really worthwhile.

Exeter Theater

Spencer Tracy in "Six Cylinder Love" and Kay Francis in "The Vice Squad" are the attractions for today and tomorrow at the Exeter. The last half of the week Joan Crawford will be seen in "Laughing Sinners." Adolphe Menjou in "The Front Page" will also be shown.

Soviet Film Bares Life in Nation

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

"The Five Year Plan," now doing its daily grind at the Majestic, is revealed chiefly as a glorified newsreel. While the showing of this series of films presenting Soviet Union industrial activities bears unmistakable marks of propaganda, the presentation is not without a colorful interest.

The scenes themselves are faithfully and seriously Russian; the spectator is led into almost every corner of the country where giant industry is being developed. He is taken hand in hand through mines, over waterways, into tractor plants, and is presented with first-hand views of collective farming on a scale almost unbelievable. That the Soviet Nicholas Young Union is exerting Herculean efforts to create for itself matchless industrial power is revealed in every scene. A voice in English breaks through the screen to describe these efforts and to set forth in figures just how far the Five Year Plan has progressed.

The pictures show clearly that salvation is not to be had without toil—without grueling labor. Still, the evidences of progress are plain; industrial development is not only in operation on the grand scale, but there is visual proof of considerable achievement. The films bring into view almost every phase of the workers' lives, their labors and their recreations.

When you have swept your eye over the Soviet Union's huge building program, touching the Arctic and the Orient, and met strange peoples, you are brought into close view of the men behind the guns—the busy executive committee which plans, directs and sees to it that the work is done. One by one you meet these gentlemen, most of them strangers; then Joseph Stalin flashes on the screen. He is a benevolent looking gentleman, perhaps a little better dressed than his companions, and for the first and only time during the run of the picture the house breaks out in applause.

Banner Year for Films Is Seen as "Picture Renaissance"

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The major motion picture producers of this country are staging a movie renaissance! The new film year, just started, will see a galaxy of super-pictures! That is the prediction of Martin J. Mullin, Paramount-Publix chief for New England. He made the forecast during a radio interview we had with him over Station WBZ hookups.

* * *

Mr. Mullin has just returned from a trip during which he investigated the industry's prospects. So we questioned him along the line of new things in technique, and the 1931-32 parade of pictures. His answers should interest every one who holds the future of the screen, close to his heart. He talked, naturally enough, more in detail regarding Martin J. Mullin plans for his own Paramount company, but gave other big producers credit for what they are doing. He noted the fact that Paramount is now celebrating its 20th "birthday jubilee." He said that just 20 years ago President Adolph Zukor has given the world "Queen Elizabeth," starring Sarah Bernhardt. He paid tribute to the continuing efforts of President Zukor through the years since that event. He declared the Jubilee Year would see the production of the best pictures Paramount has ever made.

Of films he recently saw and which are not yet released, Mr. Mullin said:

"The best example of the homeward trend of picture entertainment for the coming season is the adaptation of Theodore Dreiser's widely read and discussed, 'An American Tragedy.' Here there is no sophistication — no continental settings—instead, a powerful and gripping story of small town life, that will, without doubt, leave a mark on motion picture history.

"Still another production that is different than either of the two I have just spoken of is 'Huckleberry Finn,' with the same cast as Tom Sawyer.

"'Huckleberry Finn' has more comedy and humor in the few scenes I viewed than 'Tom Sawyer.'

"Few comedians have ever captured the fancy of the public as have the Four Marx Brothers.

"I have seen a few scenes from 'Monkey Business.' One in particular that I recall vividly lasted only five minutes but it kept me in such continual laughter that I was forced to wipe the tears from my eyes. I know you will enjoy it."

FOURTH KILLING IN NEW YORK GANG WAR

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—Police, already engaged in an intensive campaign against gangsters, had another killing to solve today, the fourth within a week.

In Manhattan and the Bronx, three newly impanelled grand juries went into the crime situation under warning by the presiding judges, to fully co-operate with police in dealing with gangsters.

The latest victim since five-year-old Michael Vergalli was mowed down by shotgun slugs in Harlem was Angelo Marino, described by police as a petty racketeer. Marino's strangled form was found yesterday in a Long Island City garage, wrapped in blankets.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney said he expected several of the cases to be solved within the next two or three days. He was especially firm that his detectives would arrest three men in connection with the killing of the Vengalli child and the wounding of four others.

Early today three men were arrested, but were later released. One of them, "Big Tee" Buzzone, had been the intended victim of the killers, police said.

BROTHER HAPPY FOR CINDERELLA

picture of the house in Lynnfield. It's great, and pretty big, too.

OOTBALL ASPIRANT

Eddie confided in his listener as he was going out for football Marshfield High this fall and anted to put on a few pounds. He as naked to the waist and deeply anned.

His infectious grin faded for a moment as he talked of his Cinderlla sister.

"I often wonder what she looks ike," he said. "Violet, that's my oldest sister, showed me a picture of her when she was a baby and that's the only picture I saw of her until that one in the newspaper. Oh, you've got one there. She looks pretty, don't you think so?

"Yes, I'd like to see her. And Violet would, too."

Eddie agreed that it must be nice to have about all the money you wanted and he also agreed—hilariously—with the reporter that a fellow can have a lot of fun even though he might be dead broke.

"I'll say so," he chuckled. "Gee, we don't need any money here and we have loads fun. And home it's great. Mrs. Smith is the only mother I ever knew and she's simply grand to Violet and me."

SISTER A HOUSEMAID

Eddie reminded the reporter that Violet is a maid in the home of a Mr. Capen in Stoughton.

When he gets through high school Eddie hopes to go to Springfield to study physical training or he might go to some other college.

"Well, Eddie," said the reporter, "maybe sister Editha will kick in with a few bucks."

Eddie laughed. "No, I guess I can work my way through. Lots of fellows do."

Eddie and Violet will have little opportunity to see their sister for many months. She is in seclusion in Maine, having left her Lynnfield home early today because of the publicity that followed probating of the will.

Mrs. Leo Frechette of Swampscott, sister of Mrs. Davis, said today that Editha plans to further education in a Southern college when she returns from Maine.

Individual and sectional opposition to a resurrection of Ku Klux Klan activities in New England has been widespread since Imperial Wizard Evans' recent announcement of the drive to be made for 1932. Within the past week there has been evidence of organized opposition and commercial rivalry.

A national association known as "Maranatha," with headquarters in New York, is reported to have been formed in Protestant circles for the express purpose of killing off the Klan or reducing its disturbing influence.

This organization is said to aim to enlighten the public to the fact that the Ku Klux Klan is actuated by mercenary and political motives and that it has outgrown its usefulness.

The name of the organization was taken from I Corinthians, 16th chapter, 22d verse, which reads:

"If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ let him be Anathema Maran-atha."

The term implies denunciation and condemnation.

Dr. C. Louis Fowler of 253 West 73d st., New York, is head of the "Maranatha."

2000 CHILDREN TOLD TO WATCH WILD DRIVERS

A safety drive for the protection of children against careless motorists was the topic of a talk by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan to 2000 children at the Strand-Publix Theater, Upham's Corner, Dorchester, today.

Today's lecture was the first of a series the registrar plans in a statewide drive to eliminate the perils of dangerous drivers. It was sponsored by the Dorchester Board of Trade in conjunction with Frank McShane, manager of the theater.

Mr. Ryan urged the children to be careful in playing around coal chutes, riding bicycles, rollerskating, and at all forms of play.

Mr. Ryan, upon request, gave an enigmatic answer to the scathing attack made upon him yesterday by City Councillor Thomas H. Green.

Green criticized the announcement made by Ryan that he would take action against all motorists arrested for drunken driving whether they were found guilty in court or not. This, Green pointed out, gave police an opportunity to "frame" persons they did not like.

And Ryan answered:

"The evening was muggy and frightfully hot, so the story goes. All were in shirt sleeves. Their breaths came in short pants. The lightning, then the thunder. Now the calm and long pants."

Gas Company Sued for Bridge Damage

Springfield, Aug. 4 (AP)—As a result of an explosion May 8, 1930, which damaged the Hampden county memorial bridge over the Connecticut river, the city of Springfield today filed in Superior Court a suit for $18,000 damages from the Springfield Gaslight Company.

It has been claimed by the city that gas leaking from one of the company's mains under the bridge was the cause of the explosion.

Lost Fortuny Canvas Sought in America

New York, Aug. 4—The famous painting, "The Garden of the Poets," by Mariano Fortuny, which disappeared before the burning of the Carmelite convent in Madrid just before the recent revolution, is being sought in this country.

Elsie K. McNeil, New York art expert, has been commissioned to search for the canvas. A large reward has been offered for its recovery.

President Likes His Gumdrops; Eats G.O.P. Brand

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP)—Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican National committee, caters to one of President Hoover's weaknesses.

Each time he comes to Washington from his Cleveland home he brings with him a small package.

Questioned today when he called on Mr. Hoover as to what the box contained, Nutt said:

"It is something the President likes."

Finally, replying to another question, he said:

"They are gumdrops. The President likes them."

Spanish Idle Get Dole

Madrid, Aug. 4 (AP)—For the first time since the advent of the republic Madrid and various other cities of Spain began paying a dole to unemployed workers today.

BANDITS STEAL $100,000 GEMS

Des Plaines, Ill., Aug. 4 (AP)—Julius Dreyfus, president of the firm of Aaron J. Dreyfus, jewelers, New York city, told police today he was robbed of $100,000 in uncut diamonds last night by three men.

Dreyfus, who was taken from a bus at Oak Grove, Wis., was released by his captors here this morning. He said he spent yesterday in Rockford, Ill., boarded the bus at Watertown and was bound for Fon Du Lac, Wis.

At Oak Grove two of the three passengers suddenly rose in the bus. One stuck a revolver against the driver's back, Dreyfus said, and the other held him up. The third passenger, a woman, became hysterical.

Dreyfus said he was commanded to get off the bus, enter a car which drew alongside the halted bus, and there robbed. He said he was tossed out of the car half a mile away.

May Christie

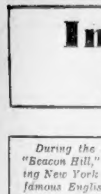

During the vacation of Betty Alden, her daily column, "Beacon Hill," will be replaced by this column of interesting New York society and literary gossip by May Christie, famous English writer, now living in the metropolis and writing of her experiences there.

EAST HAMPTON, Aug. 4—I attended the grand yearly jamboree on the green at East Hampton, known as the Ladies' Village Improvement Society Fair.

And isn't that an imposing title...?

With no fewer than 4 Committee Chairmen working under Mrs. George Ethridge, who is their able leader.

It was a heavenly day... although the mosquitoes were excessively active!

May Christie

Mr. Roland Hooker (whose pretty wife was unfortunately indisposed and unable to be at the Five-and-Ten booth) escorted me to the Fair.

Accompanied by an e-nor-mous and very docile and beautiful English sheep-dog called "Yubbie," which won a blue ribbon.

Which isn't surprising at all, as he has been awarded prizes over a number of years, and has a pedigree as old as "Home, Sweet Home."...

On the Village Green

I spent a couple of hours with the Bow Wows!

Mrs. Beale's brother is so deeply tanned with East Hampton sunburn that he much resembles one of those handsome Egyptians you see careening along in their Rolls-Royce cars in Cairo, in the Land of the Nile!

His lovely little 2-year-old daughter, Jacqueline Bouvier, toddled to the show platform and exhibited with great pride a wee Scotch terrier of about her own size!

* * *

Mrs. Dinsmore Tew, that pretty brunette girl who was Virginia Luke, showed a Welsh terrier.

I chatted with Mrs. Malcolm Heyward (mother of Justine) who looked slim and charming in a pale blue sports dress. She was exhibiting a Boston terrier—and her handsome husband, like Moses in the Bullrushes, was peeping at her admiringly through the hedge.

Twenty-two years married ... and both extremely happy! That is what one 20-year-old young lady-who-ought-to-know informed me about the inner workings of the Heyward menage . . .!

* * *

A tall, handsome young girl in a gay yellow dress and cap exhibited a "German Boxer."

She is Adelaide Moffett, ... in her very early teens . . . though I fancied she was a grown-up young lady!

I chatted with Mr and Mrs. Jay Holmes who had come over in their yacht from Sands Point. He is the son of Mrs. Christian Holmes. His wife, who is slender and brunette, looked smart in a dress of yellow mesh.

Mrs. Albert Gallatin (the pretty blonde aunt of "Freddie" and Nancy) wore white.

Miss Rosalind Kress's "NAUTI PANTS" ... (and please, Mr. Printer, don't change that "Nauti" into "Nautical") were un succes fou! They were worn by herself and by Justine Heyward . . . and Catherine Fish . . . and a fourth pretty girl named Colette O'Connor.

* * *

Wicked Husbands

Now for the booths!

Mrs. Alfred Leaman, Jr., presided at a Voting rendezvous! The Gallatin sisters were assisting her, and other beauteous damsels. When I got there, they were taking votes on the Most Wicked Husband!

I don't see any record of this at all in the final items! But with those optics . . . or am I dreaming? . . . I saw scrawled in chalk across the lower part of that blackboard, the names of John T. Sherman, Ian Kelly and Dooley Leaman . . .

And the first gentleman named was far-ahead . . .

There was also a Voting poll for the "Worst Driver," "Best Golfer" . . . and for the "Most Popular Girl." In the last one, Freddie Gallatin was close on the heels of Isabelle Gardiner . . .

The "Best Cook" was Mrs. Jack Sherman...the "Best Mother" Mrs. Harold Bar Kerr...and the "Most Beautiful Child" Buddy Chadbourne.

* * *

Farm Booth

Mrs. Harry Hamlin directed the "Farm Specials" booth, which was a cool green bower. They advertised for sale..."New Laid Eggs" ..."Old-Fashioned Pot Cheese" ..."Honey Just from Hives"... "Vegetables with the Dew on Them"... AND, last but not least, "Montauk Lobsters"!

* * *

As a finale, five beauteous mannikins appeared in dresses of varying cut and style, but all in black velvet!

* * *

Whom did I run into on the beach of the Maidstone Club but the blonde little Mrs. Arthur Macpherson, who lives with her husband in the Gotham Hotel.

He was formerly in the Diplomatic Service, but has now resigned, and is in the brokerage business.

He is an international tennis player.

She is visiting Mrs. John Cole down here. Mrs. Cole is a tall, attractive young woman who has just had a birthday luncheon at the Devon Yacht Club. She lives on East 70th st., has a house here, and one of the prettiest cabanas in chartreuse green and yellow.

Mrs. Macpherson has been vacationing all summer... first at the Sagamore Country Club in Sagamore, L. I., then up at Lake Mohonk, then at beautiful Lake George (which I enjoy so much) and then at Greenwich, Conn.

Presenting the Trotteur Dress

By ANN ARDEN

FASHION'S NEWEST quick is feather-weight wool for immediate wear for those who enjoy leading the procession, and for that happy feeling of correctness in one's first fall purchase. Now these wools are light and pliable, and interesting as to weave. They are made up into all sorts of street clothes—anything from the suit to the one-piece frock with all the little touches that go to make these dresses and suits interesting and new.

* * *

THE TRIG costume pictured has the distinction of simplicity and would be an agreeable companion for the traveller, or for general trotting about. Of light weight brown wool the Eton effect centre front is outlined in a fold of white pique forming collar and cuff over with interesting irregularity, and fastened by two brown buttons. The sleeves show long fullness below the elbow, and slanting cuff with the button closing repeated. A group of diagonal tucks over each hip assures trimness, and the belt is brown patent leather outlined in white and run through white kid buckle.

* * *

THE "FRENCH" HAT in brown felt has two deep folds on crown, its upturned brim pointing sharply over the wearer's right eyebrow. A spray of brown Coque feathers is posed at back, their tips curling about the soft crown. Its line is gay, dashing and youthful.

* * *

* * *

JUST NOW, if you are one of those who plan ahead, consider the wool dress with all of its variations and details and you will be certain of being at the height of style.

* * *

SLEEVES DO not consider taking definite set ways this season. Each one is a different creation and when they are full below the elbow they are bound to be the thing called style. A high cuff shirred a bit is one of the accepted designs and it looks as well on a silk dress as it does on one made of the softer woolen fabric.

* * *

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

New Styles at Deauville

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Deauville, Aug. 4—International regattas and tennis tournaments are furnishing the day time background for the fashionable night life of Deauville. A gala at the Ambassadeurs in honor of the yachtsmen drew a large crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Macomber entertained a large party in honor of Miss Carolina Nash of Baltimore who was in white georgette. The Marquise Strozzi was in the same party. She wore white satin with a gardenia garland on one shoulder, while Mrs. Macomber was in black lace with a sable trimmed jacket of green chiffon velvet and a necklace of white and black pearls.

Grand Duke Dmitri and his wife, Princess Ilynska, had with them "Bobby" Cornuche, daughter of the founder of the Deauville Casino. She wore a beautiful black and white printed chiffon creation. The coat was of black chiffon velvet with rather large sleeves and a soft rolled collar of white ermine.

Madame Heriot, famous French yachtswoman, was seen in the traditional custom of tweed jersey skirt and a double breasted reefer jacket. She his given up her house and now lives all the time afloat.

Among the bathers on the boardwalk, was noted Miss Mary Hamilton, who is here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton of Rochester, N. Y.

Miss Hamilton wore smart navy blue trousers of British Man-of-War width, with a smart double-breasted jacket. The jacket was belted and a small cape fell about six inches from the shoulders. A saxe blue beret and sandals completed the ensemble.

COHASSET FOLKS TO CONDUCT CABARET TO AID CHURCH FUND

Benefit Takes Place Friday in School

Cohasset again appears in the limelight. It's a cabaret this time, and an annual event, which has come off successfully each year in the past. It looks now as though this one would be no exception with such competent ladies as Mesdames Hugh Bancroft, Stoughton Bell, George R. Dewson, George R. Badger, Arthur W. Moors and Richard P. Waters in charge.

Dinners Planned

The affair is for the benefit of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, and will be held in the hall of the Ripley rd. school, Friday evening, August 7. Several dinners will be given preceeding the cabaret, among them will be that of Mr. and Mrs. Bell.

An entertainment will be put on from 8:30 until 10, followed by dancing and the serving of refreshments. Miss Ada Dewson will be in charge of the waitresses, as she did before at the Pop concert. For reservations of tables, Mrs. Waters should be called on, with Mrs. Lewis S. Bell (Adelaide Brown) in charge of the food. Her husband, Lewis S. Bell, has taken on the publicity, and David Reed, Jr., is in charge of the ushers.

Included in the list of waitresses are several debutantes of both the past and coming season, the Misses Bell, Barbara Bremer, Leslie and Gretchen Bremer, Jeanette McGregor, Emily Perkins, Alma Bird, Arsens De Rosset, Jean Adams, Katherine Johnson, Beatrice Hardin and Leslie Blake.

At Portsmouth

Another benefit on Friday is to be at the Portsmouth Navy Yard, in the form of a garden fete, for the benefit of the Navy Relief Society. This affair is to be given under the auspices of the New Hampshire Naval Relief Society, with Mrs. William C. Watts, wife of the commandant of the Navy Yard, in charge of the general committee for arrangements.

Mrs. Watts is also president of the society, and has turned her house over for their use. Booths for the sale of novelties and refreshments will be attended by the wives of the officers stationed at Portsmouth. The naval band will play for dancing on the porch of the house.

Washington, Aug. 4—Mrs. Lillian Ying Lu Kiang, American born woman of Chinese ancestry, who lost her United States citizenship on her marriage in 1920 to Dr. Kiang Kanghu, a Chinese scholar, has had her citizenship restored in the District of Columbia supreme court.

Hers was the first case in Washington of an American born woman having her citizenship, lost by marriage, restored in accordance with the act passed in the last Congress. Mrs. Kiang came here from Montreal on her husband's diplomatic passport.

She was born in San Francisco and met her husband when he was a professor of the University of California. He was connected for 12 years with the library of Congress and is now head of the department of Chinese studies of McGill University, Montreal.

Mrs. Loeas has planned a program of entertainment in their honor, although she says it is just a party of home folks from the Middle West.

Monday there will be a reception held in their honor at which some 200 of the notables of the North Shore summer colony will be guests.

Tuesday night there will be a formal dinner, to which invitations have been sent out along the shore.

NEW ENGLAND HILLS BREAK DOWN PREJUDICE

—By Gilbert Seldes—

ONE OF THE STRANGEST IMPULSES in the world is the one which makes people leave the comfort and charm of the foot of a mountain (from which the full beauty of the mountain is visible) and scramble with curses and tears to the top, in order to look down on the spot they started from. It has always seemed to me a form of mania and when I was taken to the Alps some years ago I resolutely stayed wherever the funicular railway dropped me and watched others toil. Not even the fact that the only true Alpine-climber I know is a man of genius caused me to waver in my prejudice.

GILBERT SELDES

Experience Teaches

The trouble with undergoing new experiences is that they make us lose old and comfortable prejudices. Under pressure, and groaning every step of the way, I have climbed a mountain. Not an Alp; being a good citizen, I followed our distinguished ex-President's advice and went to his native district. (The only Who's Who available, of 1915, omits Mr. Coolidge entirely, so I cannot be sure about the actual state; but New Englanders are a loyal lot, and New Hampshire would certainly satisfy the requirements of an ex-Governor of Massachusetts.)

• • •

Guide Book Stuff

Chocorua is the name of the mountain and it rises to the height, which alpestrians would despise, of 2,540 feet. It is not one of your mountains with snow and glaciers; its entire height is within the timber line and most of the climb is through the forest, even when you are walking up a perpendicular ravine where each boulder is just too high to be taken in your stride. The descriptive writers of the middle of the last century let themselves go with considerable abandon and called the mountain "defiant, haggard, grisly, dead, gaunt, desolate, ghost-like, and term—all of which seem more appropriate to the climber than to the mountain itself.

• • •

Real Happiness

There is a genuine elation in climbing. I had always assumed that the amateurs who are continually scaling peaks do it for the pleasure of telling other people about it, but now I know this is false. In the first place, a real climber refuses to associate with non-climbers; he is as exclusive, as wrapped up in his art, as a backgammon player, a reader of Proust, or a fire-chaser. And, more important still, the sense of triumph comes long before you get to the top; you would be just as happy if you stopped midway, provided you had experienced the utter weariness and the supreme happiness of getting your second wind. Going to the very top is merely playing the game; getting three-quarters of the way is the triumph of your immortal soul over your reluctant and cringing body.

• • •

No Brains at All

People who live in cities and do city work do not experience the unnerving fatigue of climbing, because their tiredness is so largely mental; on the mountain your mind stops functioning—perhaps that is its greatest joy. You are alive with all your sense; the great climber I mentioned before says that his perceptions are a thousand times more acute in the rarefied atmosphere of the heights; but the dragging down of the mental and nervous system which ordinary work involves, is altogether absent. The great discovery you make is your own capacity for exertion, your resistance—you learn, for the first time, that your heart simply will not stop beating.

• • •

No View to Annoy

A good solid mist when you get to the top is rather a blessing. The pleasure of the climb is not tainted by the secondary pleasure of a beautiful view. To get, and admire, a view, you do better to take a cog-wheel up Mt. Washington from which "on a clear day" you can see the Atlantic beating on the coast of Maine. The incline of the train makes the pine trees slant at a dangerous angle and as you come down you see lakes running up hill. You mount beyond the timber line and see great patches of cloud like relief maps on the lower peaks. It is scenery and it is magnificent, but it is not mountain climbing.

• • •

Along the Road

I should like to make a compliment to the State of New Hampshire for one of its many attractions. In the White Mountains, as you motor through forest roads, you see here and there a huge index board with the words, "Stop and look."

If you have been badgered like most other people by commands to buy, to eat, to refill, to keep in the right, to "rest-a-while at Comfort Inn," to smoke, to chew, to try—and all the other simple imperatives of American advertising (which has lost the fine art of cajolery), you will ride by the first sign with indifference. And just as you get by, you will see that the sign meant merely what it said; it wasn't selling anything; it was a little courtesy of the road telling you that a lovely view awaited your pleasure. The signs are placed at gaps in the woods, and as you look out, you see a valley, a mountain beyond it, a village between.

To be invited to look without being ordered to buy is a refreshing novelty. The stern New Englanders are not supposed to go crazy over beauty; they are, on the contrary, considered hard-bitten and hard-bargainers. Yet they are the first people in my experience to want to share a pleasure with the stranger, the passer-by who doesn't have to spend in order to enjoy. They deserve a small, but exquisitely minted, medal.

"Break ya Leg"

Russia

—By The Reader—

CONSIDERING THAT THE Russia of the day before was the sum total of a thousand years, it is not difficult to see that Russians, having smashed and destroyed it, are having quite a job building another one that will function in a satisfactory manner. Too much of the old was good, and too much of the new is untried.

Hence the bewilderment in a certain stratum of Russians. Not the moujiks, the vast hordes of Mongols and Yakhuts and the Turko-Slavs, but the small group of White Russians, the kind you think of when you recall Chekhov and Tolstoy.

• • •

But among them all is a common denominator. We might call it a genius for suffering—a sense of fatalism, not unmixed with half cheerfulness, inherent in a congeries of large tribes that have been bullied over ever since Genghis Khan and Tamerlane. The calm, the lassitude and the occasional spurts of enthusiasm are Asiatic. Ferrero, in brooding over modern Russia, gave it up as outside the province of European thought.

All this is common knowledge. No recent novels from Russia have given us a sharper glance into Russian ways of thinking than have those of Tolstoy, Chekov or even Gogol.

The value of Boris Pilnyak's "The Volga Flows to the Caspian Sea" (Cosmopolitan, $2.50) is that it reveals social (and not individual) psychology. It shows how a hundred varied types bear up, if at all, under the new dispensation.

• • •

It is a symbolical, skilfully contrived and finely written book. Pilnyak supports the Five-Year-Plan and everything, presumably, that it stands for. But there is a balance in him. He realizes the cost (the appalling cost) and implies that spiritual values have been sunk and that real gain won't be seen for another century.

"Tempo e galanfuomo" (time is a gentleman) goes the old Italian proverb, with its glossing wisdom.

Pilnyak tells of an engineering project, the building of a great dam that will turn the course of a new river, flood the countryside and build up a new regional civilization. Thus is new Russia symbolized.

Too much discipline, the lash of the priests of the Machine God, breaks the more cultivated, those who derive from the past and have such difficulty in readjusting themselves. Too much moral freedom is quite as ruinous to another type, which blows out its brains, is slain by untrammeled sex urge and what not.

• • •

Pilnyak holds the tale, the dramatic present of it, within 24 hours, and maintains his characters, when in action, about the dam. They are numerous, too—of all varieties.

As a broad drama, the novel is highly to be commended. You get a far better notion of modern Russia after going through it than you would in sitting through a thousand puerile propaganda films made for Tartar ex-serfs of arrested mentality.

This tale is of national storm and stress, with the individual counting for little, indeed. With "Oblomov" and "Julio Jurenito," that able satire of Ihrenbourg's, it is one of the three best things from Russia in years. But those who love Chekov and the glow of life and amenities will not care for it. Those have been dynamited out of Russia.

Widjets

—By Deems Taylor—

ALFRED RHEINSTEIN is a builder. Which is to say that his contacts with our social and economic structure are particularly variegated. He is a theorist, in that he can grasp the significance of an architect's plans and verify the accuracy of his calculations.

Deems Taylor

He is a practical man, in that he translates those plans into three-dimensional actuality. He is a consumer, in that he buys raw materials and manufactured articles, and a producer, in that he assembles his purchases into a finished whole. He is both an employer of labor and a representative of labor; and he must meet and cope with all sorts and classes of men—salesmen, technicians, ultimate consumers, politicians, artists, artisans and mechanics.

Like most of us, he is interested, to a painfully unacademic degree, in present-day economic conditions, and has employed some recent involuntary leisure in investigating them. The other night I heard him expound his views concerning what is wrong with us.

In Mr. Rheinstein's opinion, the fundamental cause of this business depression is the fact that we are in the Golden Age, and have not waked up to its realization. For more than a century economists, particularly those of the Socialist persuasion, have been predicting an age in which machinery would do our work with such speed and precision that we should all have abundance and plenty of leisure. Now that that age is upon us, we don't know what to do about it.

• • •

The Widjet

To understand what has happened, suppose we contemplate an imaginary widjet factory of 50 years ago. In that factory one workman, working eight hours a day, could turn out 16 widjets. The workman got eight dollars a day. Overhead—that is, the cost of his tools and material, the cost of selling, and the rent of the space he occupied—amounted to seven dollars a day more. Total cost of each workman, fifteen dollars a day. The widjets that he made sold for a dollar apiece. Total produce of each workman, sixteen dollars a day, leaving a profit of a dollar a day per workman for the manufacturer.

Today the same workman presides over an economic machine that turns out 160 widjets in a day; he has, in other words, multiplied his output by ten.

Let us assume that expenses have doubled and selling prices diminished by one-half. Wages, therefore are sixteen dollars for an eight-hour day, and overhead (counting in the cost of the machine) fourteen dollars. Total cost of each workman, thirty dollars a day. The widjets now sell for 50 cents apiece. In other words, if the workman worked only four hours a day (his wages and overhead unchanged), he would turn out 80 widjets, which would sell for forty dollars, thus giving the manufacturer ten dollars a day profit.

But the workman doesn't work only four hours a day. He still works eight. The manufacturer, having made ten dollars profit on the first 80 widjets, sees a clear profit of forty dollars on the remaining 80. And, being human, he goes after it.

For a time this works beautifully. Widjets sell like hot cakes, at a profit of $50 a day per workman. The manufacturer becomes a millionaire, and the workman, his wages doubled for the same amount of work, is happy and prosperous.

• • •

Then the Bad News

Then things begin to happen. Fifty years ago there were 10 widjet factories, turning out 1600 widjets a day each, or a total of 16,000. The number of possible widjet consumers in the country was 160,000 a day, so that there was no conceivable prospect of a flooded widjet market.

But other manufacturers, attracted by the enormous profits of the widjet business, began to go into that business, too; so that today there are 80 widjet factories. Since each factory can now turn out 16,000 widjets in a day, their combined daily output is 800,000. Thanks to the lowered price, intensive advertising and the increase in population, the possible widjet consumers have increased five-fold, and now number 800,000.

So we reach the point where the number of possible widjet users exactly equals the number of widjets made. The latter figure can be increased, but the former has reached its extreme limit. There are no more people left who could have any possible use for widjets, even if they got them for nothing. Production and consumption have reached a state of perfect equilibrium.

• • •

And the Crash

But, of course, no one knows that, definitely. The workman knows only that his wages are higher than they used to be, and his day less laborious. The manufacturer knows that business is good, even if competition is keen, and that he is able to sell all the widjets he makes. Whereupon there happens that which has just happened to us.

Of the 800,000 possible widjet users, 80,000, strictly speaking, ought not to be so. They have been induced by clever salesmen to buy them on the instalment plan, or have been tempted by the low price to buy more widjets than they can afford. Suddenly these 80,000 decide to economize a bit, and cut out widjets.

Meanwhile, ten more manufacturers have decided to go into the widjet business. The existing manufacturers, in order to meet this new competition, hire more workmen and reduce prices. The newcomers do likewise. Soon we have a daily output of 1,200,000 widjets, which the manufacturers are trying to sell to consumers who can't use more than 720,000. Since economic results occur slowly, it may be two or three years before anyone discovers that we are busily piling up a mountain of unconsumed and unconsumable widjets.

When the news does get around, many of the widjet factories fail. Prices of widjets drop, and widjet stocks go begging. The gadget factories, who have been doing the same thing, also begin to feel the bite on the hickey and jigger industries. Thousands of workmen lose their jobs—and, consequently, their buying power. Business is bad and gets worse.

That is the position we are in today. So far, our ideals of remedying the situation have not gone much beyond handing out charity to the unemployed and telling each other that business is going to pick up. Mr. Rheinstein thinks there are other things we might do. What they are I shall discuss, by your leave, in a subsequent instalment.

ROYAL TRAGEDY 42 YEARS OLD EXPLAINED

Vienna, Aug. 4 (INS)—From the lips of the late Emperor Franz Josef's closest friend came today a belated explanation of the tragic death of Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, found lifeless by the side of his dead sweetheart in the hunting lodge of Mayerling 42 years ago.

Frau Katherina Schratt, lifelong friend of Franz Josef, says Rudolph took his own life after firing a bullet into the brain of his sweetheart, the beautiful Baroness Marie Vetsera.

Her statement was a dramatic augmentation of the official version of the tragedy given out by the Emperor the day after the shooting. But many persons preferred to believe that Rudolph was murdered by relatives of the baroness.

"It was a touching tragedy," Frau Schratt said. "The Crown Prince abandoned life because he saw no hope of permanently uniting with little Marie Vetsera, whom he loved uncontrollably.

"Despite all that has since been written, the Crown Prince first shot the unhappy Baroness through the temple and then shot himself."

Frau Schratt, now more than 70 years of age, was one of the most beautiful and talented women of Franz Josef's court. She was on equally good terms with the Emperor and Empress, and was in the palace with the monarchs the morning the tragedy was discovered.

BELGIUM RINGS WAR MEMORY

Brussels, Aug. 4 (AP)—The 17th anniversary of the invasion of Belgium by the German army was commemorated throughout the country today.

At 9:30 a. m. a cannon shot gave the signal to sound church bells, whistles and sirens for half a minute, followed by a minute of silence.

On August 4, 1914, Gen. Von Emmich's troops crossed the Belgian frontier at Gemenich and distributed proclamations calling on the people to submit to the German ultimatum.

M. P., Fined, Wants to Go to Prison

Glasgow, Aug. 4 (AP)—John McGovern, Member of Parliament, and eight other persons were fined £2 each with an alternative of 20 days' imprisonment today for preaching on the Glasgow Green without permits.

McGovern said: "I don't want time to pay. I will go to prison."

McGovern was ejected from the House of Commons during the unprecedented disorders when he raised the question of allowing lay preachers to speak on Glasgow Green.

Ford to Make 100,000 New Models in Sept.

Detroit, Aug. 4 (AP)—The Detroit News, commenting on a recent reduction of the employment roster of the Ford Motor Company, says the reduction is temporary in preparation for an "improved model" in September.

The News says the daily payroll of the Ford Company this month will approximate $500,000, and that the September schedule calls for 100,000 units of the "improved model."

Judge Raps Lawyers Who Know Clients Are Guilty

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—Federal Judge Richard J. Hopkins of Kansas told the lawyers before him today that, in his opinion, no attorney should represent at a trial in federal court any client who had admitted that he was guilty or who was in fact guilty in the attorney's knowledge.

Judge Hopkins had before him for sentence Julius Miller, convicted of attempting to pass a $20 counterfeit bill.

"The statement that this defendant was guilty was practically made to the court," declared Judge Hopkins. "Yet he took the stand and perjured himself."

1700 HORSES IN DUBLIN SHOW

Dublin, Irish Free State, Aug. 4 (AP)—The prettiest girls in all Ireland and the finest horses were gathered at the Balls Bridge Fair Grounds today for the 200th annual Dublin Horse Show week.

Seventeen hundred horses are entered, 522 of them hunters, said to be twice as many as the entries in this class at any other fair in the world.

There are 11,000 visitors from Great Britain and many from the continent and the United States.

CITIES BID FOR CONVENTIONS

Washington, Aug. 4 (INS)—Bidding for next year's major political conventions is becoming general.

Atlantic City notified the Republican National Committee today that it is sending a committee to Washington to present its claims for the 1932 meeting.

Philadelphia put in its bid ten days ago.

Chicago has served notice of intention of out-bidding all competition at the proper time.

Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, San Francisco and other cities are in the field for one or both conventions.

5 Killed in Bomb Explosion on Train

Vienna, Aug. 4 (INS)—Five passengers were killed and many were injured when five time bombs exploded on a train near Susak, Jugoslavia. The bombs had been hidden in two cars.

In an effort to prevent such outrages, laid by the government to Croatian agitators, Jugoslavia recently promulgated an order prohibiting any but Jugoslavian trains from entering Jugoslavian territory.

Love Is Safeguard of Life, Declares Noted Biologist

Oxford, England, Aug. 4 (AP)—Sir Arthur Thomson, biologist, told the British Hygiene Council today that the safeguard of life is to fall in love.

"Love," he said, "has three notes—physical fondness which is indispensable; emotional attraction linked to purely physical attraction through aspect of beauty and strength; and a third note, often missed altogether, of higher sympathies in intelligence, purpose and ideals."

Ready for you at your First National Store the next morning—24 hours fresher than the average delivered milk in Boston.

It is early in the morning shortly after milking time. A speedy truck draws up to the farm milk house, where the milk has been placed to cool. The milk is loaded on, the truck is on its way to the creamery in Bellows Falls, picking up more milk as it goes.

Fifty trucks are making the rounds of the 1300 selected farms in Vermont that supply Brookside milk. Within a few hours they are gathered at the creamery. The milk is unloaded, inspected, pasteurized, bottled and iced. Tonight it will be shipped by fast trains to Boston, and tomorrow morning it will be on sale at your First National Store—24 hours fresher than most delivered milk in Boston.

That is why Brookside milk has that rich, fresh, new milk flavor that is so healthy and delicious. Because it is handled so rapidly from farm to you, and because it is bottled within a few hours after milking there is no opportunity for contamination or absorption of foreign flavors of any kind. That is why children find it so good—and they are the best judges of milk. Try some, today.

What $16,000 buys in The American Weekly

A full page in color more than twice the size of any other magazine page in the world . . . 5,500,000 families at a cost of less than ½ cent per family . . . The attention of the entire family instead of a single buying factor.

All merchandise must be sold twice. It must be sold first to the retailer, who in turn must sell it to the consumer.

Advertising can help in both instances. It can influence the retailer to stock the merchandise and it can create the consumer demand necessary to move that merchandise from the dealer's shelf.

The head of an advertising agency which serves a manufacturer of national reputation recently referred to The American Weekly as "the action magazine."

When asked what he meant by this statement he replied that he regards magazines generally as long-pull media but that The American Weekly not only possesses the long life and long-pull effectiveness of other magazines but in addition stands without rival in bringing about immediate sales.

In times of great prosperity manufacturers may be willing to wait years to build prestige and create sales for the future.

But in times like these, when sales are not easy to make, most manufacturers do not want to wait three to five years to make their sales and cash their profits. They want quick turnover and the way to quick turnover is to move merchandise quickly from the dealer's shelf into the hands of the consumer.

The outstanding record of merchandising and advertising successes piled up by The American Weekly over a period of years cannot be matched by any other magazine in the national field.

With its 5,500,000 circulation—with its great page more than twice the size of any other magazine—with its blanket coverage of the richest buying areas of the nation, this action magazine offers a national advertising and irresistible selling force which cannot be duplicated by any other single publication.

And in addition The American Weekly does the biggest job at the LOWEST COST.

To give some idea of the coverage of this mighty magazine, let us analyze its circulation.

The American Weekly concentrates and dominates in 578 of America's 997 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over. (1930 U. S. census figures.)

In each of 152 cities, it reaches one out of every two families
In 108 more cities, 40 to 50% of the families
In an additional 146 cities, 30 to 40%
In another 172 cities, 20 to 30%

. . . and, in addition, more than 1,700,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy The American Weekly.

Cock-A-Doodle-Doo

The American Weekly advertising revenue and lineage for the first six months of 1931 was the greatest for any six months' period in its history. The month of July was the greatest July in volume of advertising lineage and revenue, and the July 12 issue was the greatest individual issue in volume of advertising lineage and revenue which The American Weekly has ever published.

THIS IS LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

NOBODY REALLY CARES FOR MUCH LITERATURE, but everybody is interested in Best Sellers. They are a kind of barometer of the reading taste of all of us who can read at all.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

(There are still 4.3 per cent of us illiterate.) They tell which way the publishing wind is blowing. Of course, it is only a faint indication, because most of us never buy a book. Mr. R. L. Duffus, in his valuable little book "Books," tells us that the average American buys two books a year, takes two from a lending library, and borrows (steals) two.

The number of books sold is not even an exact test of the kind of books desired, since there is no gift ac lable to error as a book. Most people give away the kind of book they like themselves. As Saint Bernard the Iconoclast remarks, "Do not unto others as you would have them do unto you; their tastes may not be the same." The rest of us are likely to go into a book store and ask the clerk for a nice book suitable for a middle-aged woman who is just beginning to go into colors again.

Anyway, the monthly best seller list is always interesting and the annual best seller list more interesting still. The usual best seller list runs from January, but "The Publishers Weekly" also prints one, which runs from June until July—why, it is not exactly plain.

Tastes Vary Little

The best selling novels are generally pretty much of a muchness. That is to say, they tend to run to type. They are mostly the fashionable novels, the kind that gentlefolk like. They never contain the really exotic or sensational successes, on the other hand, they seldom contain those elemeatary best sellers like "The Sheik."

The reason for this seems to be that only the really solid and well-to-do people, mostly women, buy new novels. (Cheap fiction reprints to read on trains do not come into the list, of course.) And the well-to-do lady novel buyer is usually conservative and has a decorous taste in fiction. She wouldn't buy Bodenheim or Dreiser or Ben Hecht on a bet. Only intellectuals (who are always poor) read them. On the other haud, she wouldn't be seen dead with a copy of Harold Bell Wright in her hand.

No, she picks books like "Years of Grace," which was a best seller every month from last June to this July, for 30 months before the Pulitzer Prize Committee crowned it. Incidentally, my 11-year-old daughter discovered it last summer, before I had read it, and pressed it upon me enthusiastically. She has read it twice since. Which speaks well either for my daughter, or the Pulitzer Prize Committee, or maybe Mrs. Barnes, who wrote it.

The second was the novel "Grand Hotel," which is running serially in this newspaper and about which I want to say something later. Its success on the New York stage probably accounts for its best selling quality. Everyone who saw the play wanted to read the book.

J. D. Passley's "Angel Pavement," which got its start from the success of "The Good Companions," was the third, although it was not a cheerful book compared with that rich and Dickensy comedy. Then came "The Good Earth," "Twenty-Four Hours" and "The Bridge of Desire," none of them so hot.

One a Work of Genius

Last came "Philippa," one of Anne Douglas Sedgewick's well-bred Anglo-French studies. The most astonishing record was "The Road Back," successor to Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front," which made the yearly best seller list on two months' sales. But that, of course, is a work of genius, the only one on the list. All the rest are interesting, somewhat conventional, novels suitable for ladies with money, all except Bromfield's "Twenty-Four Hours," which is pretty Hollywood.

The non-fiction list is much more amusing, because there never is any law or order to it. All sorts of people buy non-fiction books, especially if they are cheap enough. Think of Chic Sale's scatological "The Specialist," or Eddie Cantor's little book of the stock market crash.

This year the great success is "Boners," the book of examination errors. They sold enormously. Books of scandal also sell. On this present 12-month list is the unspeakable "The Strange Death of President Harding," a piece of gratuitous and unproved slander of the dead.

"The Death of President Harding," "Boners," and Culbertson's "Blue Book of Contract Bridge," are the freaks of the list. On the other hand, it is interesting to see that "The Story of San Michele," that fascinating life story of the Swedish physician Mundt, has been a best seller steadily ever since it was published in November, 1929—for more than 18 months. Next to that comes "Education of a Princess," also a book of personality.

The others on our 12-month list are "Lone Cowboy," "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," that curious blend of adventure and mysticism, and Owen Wister's "Roosevelt"—all, it may be noted, studies in personality. The proper study of mankind is man, so far as our book buying tastes are concerned.

4 in 100 Are Published

The other two are James Truslow Adams' sterling piece of condensed biography, "The Adams Family," and Admiral Byrd's "Little America," the story of the conquest of the South Pole by airplane. The moving pictures did not prosper, although they were not expensive, whereas the book, which is rather expensive, has sold extraordinarily well. Which may offer a hint as to the comparative mentality of the movie-going audience and the book-reading audience.

William Webster Ellsworth, a distinguished editor now retired, in a book called "Creative Writing," tells us that the best seller is a very rare bird. The average of accepted book manuscripts is four in 100. The book that gets published has three chances out of 97 of being a real success. Out of a thousand novels published in any one year about 30 may be called successful. In roulette, says Mr. Ellsworth, you have one chance out of 26 to win, so that you are more apt to make money at roulette than at writing fiction.

That will give you some idea of what it means to have a best seller. Read the best selling list of American fiction for 22 months, and may make you a little more thoughtful about that idea of yours of throwing up the old job and taking a chance on writing a best seller. Merit alone does not solve the problem. Timeliness means much. I know of a writer whose novel was the best seller of an entire decade, whose last novel is still unpublished—because he outlived his day. So quickly do literary fashions change!

MY ROMANCE

Rudy and Bride Are Determined to Make Marriage a Success

CHAPTER 8

I have resolved that married life with Fay will be a continuing, living romance. And I can see from her actions that she has made a similar resolution.

Romance is not all sentiment; it has a strong admixture of common sense. I have tried to study Fay, and to discover her reactions to various manifestations of romance. Like all girls she appreciates little unexpected attentions which bespeak a romantic inspiration.

It is easy for me to give her these attentions for I take definite pleasure in her surprised delight. After all there is a certain amount of selfishness in doing things for someone you care for.

"AVOID ROUTINE"

The surest way of keeping romance alive throughout marriage is in avoiding any sort of routine; at least that is my theory and I am staking my happiness on it.

For instance, I know men who send their wives flowers regularly, yes, too regularly—that's the trouble. They leave a standing order at the florists, and on certain days, like clockwork, a beautiful bouquet is sent out with a messageless card. The wife knows the routine. On certains days of each week she expects the flowers. After a while these routine bouquets give her no thrill. Of course she appreciates them, but there is no longer any element of surprise. Her romantic reactions become dulled. It is like knowing the denouement of a play. And the regularity of the visits of the florist's boy reveals that the flowers represent no great amount of thoughtfulness or consideration on the part of the husband. He has merely left a standing order, and promptly forgets about it except to pay the monthly bills. And, finally, the wife forgets even to say "thank you" when he comes home.

Now, from time to time I will probably send flowers to Fay, but with no routine regularity. When the flowers we may have in the apartment begin to wilt, unless Fay notices it first, it will give me a great deal of pleasure to select flowers myself, especially those I know Fay will like. And I will try to vary them so that each bouquet will have an individuality. And with each I will probably send a little message, sometimes one of sentiment, sometimes a "kidding" phrase so that Fay will never know just what to expect.

I know that she will be just so much more happy after receiving them. Not always will the bequets be delivered by the impersonal florist's boy; often I will bring them myself.

STRIVES FOR ROMANCE

Of course, it would be cheaper to live in her state of California, where she grows them in her own backyard, and all I would have to do would be to go around back before I came in to bring her these same bouquets that cost New York's high prices.

Two nights ago I came home and found a large bouquet of flowers in a box. My curiosity getting the better of me I opened the box and read the card. The flowers were the consignatory gift of an old boy-friend of Fay's, a boy whom she had often mentioned to me, and they were really lovely.

He had paid for the flowers in California, and they had been served by the California florist and delivered by a New York florist. I quickly substituted my card for his. Later on, when Fay came in, the maid brought her the big box of flowers; I watched her expressor very carefully as she opened the box. She studied the arrangement of the flowers for almost a minute and a half, and then turned to me and gave me a big kiss, saying:

"Since Bill isn't here, you'll have to take the kiss for him!"

But the surprises I try to give Fay are not always merely amusing. I like to bring home little gifts which will please her. Her tastes do not run to expensive luxuries. She prefers artistic things. It is the thought behind the gift that really counts, so I try to get [illegible] things that are unusual, things that demand some care in selection.

ALWAYS THE LOVER

My attitude toward Fay is always that of a lover rather than a taken-for-granted husband. To me she is a sweetheart, and I believe she considers me in the same light and I try to maintain a romantic aura around our lives.

I have always had lots of fun pretending certain relations in many of the things I do. Yesterday it happened that an appointment which I had for the afternoon was cancelled, due to George White's not being at the theater to rehearse us, so I had several hours free. Instead of going home and merely lolling around, I phoned Fay. Our conversation was something like this:

"Hello, Fay? This is Rudy—Rudy Vallee. Perhaps you remember me. I met you out in Hollywood. What are you doing this afternoon? Would you like to come for a little jaunt? We could drive up along the Hudson and have a little bite to eat at some roadside inn."

"I don't know, Mr. Vallee," she laughed, "You see, I'm married and I'm very fond of my husband and I don't know what he'd think of it."

"Oh," I replied, "leave that to me. As a matter of fact, your husband is right here beside me and he has given his permission. If you like I'll bring him along, provided he promises not to be in the way."

CARRIES OUT "ACT"

Fay laughed heartily and replied:

"Very well, I'll be glad to go. I'll be ready in half an hour."

I rushed home and let myself in with my own key. I called to Fay, who was busily dressing, and she replied:

"Oh, I didn't expect you home this afternoon. I made another 'date.'"

I merely made a pretence of pouting and went to my own room, where I arrayed myself in fresh clothes. Then I went outside the apartment and rang the bell. The maid looked at me with a most surprised expression. I merely said in a loud voice so that she could hear, that Mrs. Vallee was expecting me. I'm sure the maid thought my mind had suddenly been affected. She looked [illegible]ened.

When Fay appeared I greeted her like a bashful suitor. She could hardly contain her amusement, but she carried off her part well, for she is an excellent actress.

So we went driving along the Storm King highway that skirts the beautiful Hudson, a most romantic setting. Once I attempted to change my role to that of husband and kiss her, but Fay said roguishly:

"This afternoon you are not my husband—but merely a nice friendly boy. Now, keep your place."

"Well, I replied, "next time I play a part, I'll at least be your fiance."

Anyway, we had a delightful afternoon. It was just one of those romantic episodes which keep marriage from becoming mere routine.

A "HUMAN" MACHINE

CARTER ALERTLY LOOKED FOR FAULTS

JOHN CARTER had a reputation for efficiency. He was a virile example of exactness and business perspicacity, and he expected all his subordinates to be as efficient as he was.

Perhaps that was the reason that he never kept a secretary for any length of time until Jane Trumbull appeared.

He had taken Jane on approval, and with many misgivings, for it did not seem probable that a girl with soft gray eyes and smiling mouth could last long under the rigorous routine that ruled in his office.

For the first few mornings he had alertly looked for faults, and when he failed to find any flaw in his letters, when his explosions failed to produce even the lift of an eyebrow, Carter sat back and congratulated himself on the acquisition to his workaday menage.

After a month he gave Jane down as the model secretary and wondered how he had ever gotten along without her.

As for Jane, she regarded Carter as a highly geared piece of machinery functioning without regard to the human element. The head of an important department, he was consumed with ambition and hurled in his effort to win the approval of old Horace Manning, the head of the firm.

Manning had a keen eye for value and he respected Carter's ability and eye for detail, but go far and keen to find something lacking in Carter's character, something that would prevent his rapid rise. Was that the reason not one of his subordinates was ever friendly with him?

For a few moments there was silence. Carter was thinking until Jane, who was put in the rapid rise of Manning's art? Was that the reason not one of his subordinates was ever friendly with him?

"All right," he said, "if you'll let me—I'll take back my remarks—I'll go ahead with Miller's department and I'll try to profit by your suggestions."

"The salary will be considerably lower," said Manning.

"Oh, h—," said Carter. "When do you want me to begin—and by the way—I'd like to have my secretary go along with me—she's used to my ways."

Manning nodded assent and grinned as the door closed on his employe.

The news of the change caused a buzz in the office. To Jane it seemed almost absurd, considering the record Carter had made. It was a step down and she found herself exulting, for she could not conceal from her own heart a decided liking for Carter—even if he was a machine.

"Come Along, Too" "Glad to," Said Jane

He broke the transfer to her himself—"I hope you'll come along with me," he said.

"Glad to," said Jane. Then she added impulsively, "I'm so sorry for you, but I think it's fine of you to take it standing up—so many men would have quit."

Carter looked at her with a new light in his eyes. "Thanks," he said. "I think the first thing I ought to do is to get young Perkins back—I'm afraid I was a little too dictatorial there—"

After they were established in Miller's office and Jane had written the letter to Perkins Carter leaned back in his chair "I'm going to make big success of this department," he said, "but I'm going to work on a different basis. Perkins was right—I'm too much of a machine. Perhaps it's because I've been lonely and self-centered. I wonder if you'd consider going out to dinner with me tonight. I know one ought to mix business and social affairs, but I have a real reason."

Jane nodded. "If you'd asked me yesterday," she smiled, "nothing would have induced me to go, but now—well it's different."

Autocratic Rule of Jane Trumbull's Boss

About this time an episode occurred that demonstrated the autocratic rule of Jane's boss. A young man assigned by Carter to do a certain job had failed to complete it to the latter's satisfaction.

Carter called him down. "I'm going to demote you," he said brusquely.

The young man flushed. "But, see here, Mr. Carter, that's not fair—it isn't my fault that this thing didn't work out the way you thought it would."

"We won't argue about it," answered Carter. "Business is like an army, we do what our superiors tell us to do without question."

"Oh, we do," said the other. "I don't—I resign. The trouble with you is you're nothing but a machine." He stalked out of the room, leaving Carter astonished and Jane highly sympathetic. Perhaps she showed it, for Carter turned to her with a forced smile.

"There's no place for sentiment in business," he remarked. Jane made no reply but she heard repercussions of the incident. The other girls were free in their condemnation. "What'd you expect?" asked Manning's secretary. "Carter may be a wonder but he was born without a heart."

It was the secretary who mentioned the occurence to her employer. Otherwise Manning would probably have never heard of it.

He made it his business to look into all the details and a fortnight later, when the affair was all but forgotten in the whirl of work, recommended Carter to his partners.

Carter was in line for a promotion. He requested it now. His astonishment was all the greater when Manning, to his chagrin—

"Carter," he said, "what I say may surprise you, but in an organization like this anything may happen. I want you to take charge of Tiffen's department from now on." Carter frowned and his mouth tightened. His face had gone white—almost the very words he had used himself. Suddenly he burst forth: "Disciplined, be damned, I'll resign."

"What do you mean?" demanded Carter, bridling. "Young man," said his boss, "you've gone a long way with us—you've made good in all but one vital particular—"He op" said Carter.

"Modern business" continued Manning, "has got to have all the qualities you embody to succeed, plus one thing more—that's the human element—it's got to have a heart—it's got to understand the men and women who work with it and help to make it what it is—this isn't a Sunday school lesson it's good common sense. I don't know where you'll find your next job, but recommend you never brought it here."

Human Element Business Must Have Heart

Carter was white—almost the very words he had used himself. Suddenly he burst forth: "Disciplined, be damned, I'll resign."

"Good," said Manning. "I've no use for a man who runs under fire."

"What do you mean?" demanded Carter, bridling. "Young man," said his boss, "you've gone a long way with us—you've made good in all but one vital particular—"He op" said Carter.

"Modern business" continued Manning, "has got to have all

3 MORE INFANTILE PARALYSIS CASES HERE

BAILEY WARNS MOTHERS OF DANGER

Quick Action Is Essential to Save Children; State in Serum Blood Hunt

State and city acted today in the infantile paralysis danger, as three new cases were reported in Boston, making a total of five in the past four days.

A statewide call for blood for [illegible] victims for making [illegible] was issued by Dr George H. Bigelow, state health commissioner.

A similar call was issued by Dr. Fred [illegible], deputy city health [illegible] to be [illegible] to [illegible] to [illegible] for antitoxin.

The total number of new cases throughout the state thus far in August is 20. In July there were 45, of which 24 were in Boston.

CARRIED BY HUMANS

"I do not want to become panicky," Dr. Bailey said, "but I must admit that at present my associates and I are watching the situation closely.

"Families in which one case has already been discovered are being examined daily and it is my belief that the real danger is not from flies and other insects, as is commonly believed, but rather is from human carriers.

"The great danger is from careless parents who have had one child stricken with this disease and who permit their other youngsters to mingle with their playmates.

"The mothers of Boston should keep their little ones away from the vicinity of houses where this disease has been reported.

QUICK ACTION NEEDED

"Mothers should watch their children carefully. First indications of the presence of the disease are fever, pain in the legs and other portions of the body, upset stomach and irritability.

Another indication is that the spinal chord seems to have lost its flexibility and instead of sitting right up in bed in the morning the child will push itself up with its hands.

"Mothers of Boston should call a physician the minute their children show symptoms, because if serum is injected into the spinal column within 48 hours after the child shows signs of illness it can be saved from paralysis."

BLOOD IS NEEDED

State Health Commissioner Bigelow praised Gov. Roosevelt of New York, a former victim of the disease, for setting such a splendid example by giving his blood for [illegible].

"There is enough serum available for immediate needs but if these cases are to continue, organized efforts by state and local health departments will be necessary to gather a supply," said Dr. Bigelow.

"Blood is desired from patients who had the disease from 6 months to 18 years ago. Usually each donor furnished enough serum for treatment of two or three cases.

"The state department, local health officials and the Harvard Infantile Paralysis Commission are going over lists of persons who have had the disease and the state school at Canton is co-operating."

'THEY HOUNDED ME!' CONVICT TELLS COURT

Louis A. Brown Charges Parole Board Kept Him From Jobs; "Had to Steal"

Louis A. Brown, ex-convict, in Suffolk superior court today accused the state parole board of hounding him, refusing to help him get work and forcing him to resort to burglary.

He made his impassioned accusations before Judge Williams after pleading guilty to possessing burglars tools and to larceny of a suit case.

GETS A CHANCE

Court was so impressed by his story that the case was continued for disposition until Judge Williams has an opportunity of discussing it with parole board officials and state prison authorities.

Brown, who is 45 and a native of Texas, has served time in several jails and prisons. He was arrested two weeks ago while trying to dispose of articles stolen during breaks in Newton, Waltham Arlington, Somerville and Belmont. There are warrants for him in Middlesex County.

He told Judge Williams that after his release on parole from State prison everything was going all right till an agent of the parole board stepped in and put things on the bum."

"STEAL OR STARVE."

He said his landlord was willing to trust him for rent while he sought work but that the parole agent told the landlord he was a State prison inmate and not to be trusted.

The parole board, he said, denied his application for aid in getting work and the situation became such that he was forced to go back to his old ways.

"It was a case of dire necessity," he told the court.

KIDNAPER OF 2 GIRLS HUNTED

A kidnaper who abducted two little Somerville girls by forcing them into his automobile is being sought by police in that city.

The victims were Shirley Matthews 7, of 11 Jackson pl., Haverhill, and Pauline Matthews, 5, of 56 Bowdoin st., West Somerville, who was kidnaped on Broadway.

Both were later released near their homes.

Pauline Matthews, a sister of Shirley, was [illegible] dragged into the car. She ran to the home of her uncle, Raymond Hamilton, and informed her parents.

Three-quarters of an hour later the Matthews child was seen walking down Mystic ave., Somerville, seeking her way home. Police questioned the child, but she was so overcome with fright, that she could only point out the place on Mystic ave., where the kidnaper had put her out of the car.

Mrs. David W. Rosenberg, mother of Libbie, informed the Somerville police that the kidnaper let her daughter out of the car at Powder House Park, a short distance from her home. The child was found crying by a group of playmates.

'KIDNAPED' FOR AN HOUR

Shirley Matthews, seven years old, came from Haverhill to visit her uncle in Somerville—then a man picked her up, put her in an auto and whisked her away. Excitement grew and grew, for there had been another abduction about the same time, but in an hour or so she was seen in Mystic ave. and taken home. She had been where there were "trees and water."

RUM 'PLANTED,' MAN CHARGES

Oasis enthusiasts were thrown no end today in municipal court and believed they had hit upon an ultimate when two accused residents of Bradford at declared that while they might have been selling liquor, nearly everybody else on the street also was selling it.

George Gomez, one of the defendants, while admitting that he had felt the urge to get some of the business, accused police of "planting" a quart of liquor back of a barrel in the backyard. He appealed a $100 fine and sentences of six months.

Mrs. Catherine Hovdy, mother of three children, declared she had been selling only a week.

More than 3000 East Boston residents, most of them women and cheering children, staged a friendly demonstration on the Condor st. shore line in East Boston today, when state and city officials inspected the main frontage on which old hulks have been complained of as a health menace.

Following the inspection Health Commissioner Frank X. Manning of Boston said no action would be taken pending a State appropriation to clear away the rotting hulks and make a beach on the site, for which East Boston residents have long been fighting.

CHEER INSPECTORS

Carrying signs and placards bearing "We Want a Beach," "Give Us a Clean Place to Swim," and similar messages the youngsters swarmed over the wreck on the shore and cheered the officials while they made their inspection.

In the inspection party were Dr. Mahoney, Deputy Health Commissioner F. J. Donnellan, District Fire Chief Henry Fox, Edward Wright, sanitary engineer of the State Department of Health, Representatives Billy Barker and Alexander Sullivan, of East Boston, ex-Representative George Mahoney of East Boston, Thomas Barry, president of the Quincy Club of East Boston, Richard Parkhurst of the Boston Port Authority, Capt. G. P. Lord, supervisor of the Boston Port Authority, City Cooper Joe Timothy Donovan of East Boston, David O'Connor, president of the E. Boston Board of Trade, and Capt. William P. THE ENGINE AT HEART OF WORLD IS LOVE

By HELEN ROWLAND

FUNNY, ISN'T IT, that the more efficient, intelligent and brilliant women become, the less seriously men seem to take them.

• • •

Woman may be the weaker vessel filled with curiosity. But, a woman is curious only about the things that concern her heart, her happiness and her friends, while a man is curious about EVERYTHING, from what makes the wheels go 'round to why God made him so wonderful.

HELEN ROWLAND.

Once, love was either the essence of romance and purity of the triple extract of sin—but now, it is just a plain drink of lukewarm water.

The super-amorist, who can leave three or four sophisticated modern damsels each feeling, at the end of the summer, that she was positively "the only woman he ever really loved," may be a gay deceiver . . . but he certainly has his mission in life.

For some dark and inexplicable reason, NO man ever throws away a key. If he could have them all buried with him, doubtless it would make him happy. Which is why nothing intrigues a woman's imagination quite so much as a man's keyring—that magic sesame to all his present secrets and dead dreams.

A man's idea of packing a trunk is, first, filling it like a sardine can, and then wrapping the shoe-cleaner in a nice white blouse and tucking it in the hat-tray.

Plain Soap and Water an Ideal Disinfectant

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

WHAT IS a good disinfectant? That is a question I am frequently asked. It is always asked in the home where there has been sickness. It is a common question indeed, during epidemics of mumps, measles, chicken-pox and other infectious diseases.

Dr. Copeland

GRAND HOTEL :-: By VICKI BAUM

Baron Saves Dancer by Arrival

"WHAT KIND of a man are you," she asked again. She was deeply conscious at this moment of her astonishment over such confidences, when in so much they were strangers. "Yesterday I did not even know you. Tell me who you are," she asked with her lips close to his. Gaigern put his arms round her.

"I? There's little to be said of me," he answered obediently. "I am a prodigal son. I am the black sheep of a good flock. I am a mauvais sujet and I shall end on the gallows."

"Yes?" she asked with a little gurgling laugh deep in her throat.

"Yes," said Gaigern with conviction. He had begun to recite the old phrases from the homilies of his schooldays in fun, but now he was somehow inspired to confess and reform.

"I am uncontrolled," he went on. "I am quite without character and unspeakably inquisitive. I am good for nothing. At home I learned to ride and play the gentleman. At school to say my prayers and lie. In the war to shoot and take cover. And beyond that I can do nothing. I am a gypsy, an outsider, an adventurer."

"Yes, and what else?"

"I am a gambler who is not above cheating. I have stolen too before now. Properly speaking, I ought to be in prison. Meanwhile, I have a good time and do as I please and live on the fat of the land. Now and again, too, I get drunk, and I ought to add that I have been work-shy since birth."

"Go on," whispered Grusinskaya in delight. Her throat quivering with suppressed laughter.

"Further, I am a criminal. A burglar," Gaigern said sleepily.

"Nothing more? A murderer, perhaps?"

"Yes, of course. A murderer too. I was within an ace of killing you," Gaigern asserted.

Grusinskaya went on laughing a little. All the same she became suddenly serious. She clasped her fingers behind her neck, and said very softly:

"If you had not come in I shouldn't be alive now!"

"You must never do anything like that again. You must stay here. I shall never let you go. I need you," he said. He heard himself saying these astounding words in a husky voice that seemed to come directly from the depths of his heart.

"No, now it is different. Now it is all right again. You are with me now," Grusinskaya whispered. He could not understand, for she said it in Russian. But he heard the tone of her voice and this was enough. He forgot the pearls in the pocket of his pajamas, and she forgot her failure and the deadly dose of veronal in the teacup.

Love had played no great part in Grusinskaya's life. All the passion of her body and soul went into dancing. Though she had been besieged, courted, and pursued by numbers of men who had fallen in love with her, she did not in her heart believe in the existence of love. It seemed to her as unreal as the painted drop scenes, the temples of love, and the banks of roses which formed the settings for her dances. She could intoxicate but she could not be intoxicated. When she danced she could let herself go in self-oblivion. In love, however, she never lost her self-consciousness. She stood outside and watched herself. She did not believe in love and she did not live without it.

For love she knew, was an ingredient of success. As long as she was young, as long as flowers poured into her dressing room, as long as men were ready to ruin themselves or commit any folly and to sacrifice their families and fortunes for her sake, she was conscious of success. It could be estimated in terms of declarations of love, threats of suicide, pursuits across the world, and costly presents just as it could in terms of applause, and the number of her curtains. She might not know it, but the admirers whom she bewitched were really to her only a public with whom she had a success. And the first time she realized with a shock of horror that success was deserting her was when Gaston deserted her retinue and married an insignificant woman of good family. The atmosphere in which she lived began to cool off after being for so many years in a continual glow. The shadows lengthened to an inconceivable evening. It was a decline, though by steps so innumerable and so small that it was scarcely noticed. And yet the distance she had traversed was immense. Before the war, she had danced the whole world into an ecstasy of romantic delight. Now she begged her little applause from hostile and disillusioned cynics. And at the end of it all lay utter loneliness and a fatal dose of veronal.

Hence the man on the balcony was much more than just a man to Grusinskaya. He was a miracle. At the 11th hour he had made his appearance in No. 68 to rescue her. He was success coming to her in a simple shape; the world pressing eagerly to her; the proof that the years of romance were not yet over. She had fallen, and there he had stood to catch her as she fell.

It's the World's Loss When the Old Hymns Go

By WINIFRED BLACK

GOING, GOING—gone—the old hymns your mother used to sing to rock you to sleep when you shut the door on your finger, and the cat scratched you, and the little girl next door was "mad" and said she would never speak to you again, never as long as she lived.

Winifred Black

They're making a new hymn book over in England, and they've thrown out over a thousand of the queer, sad, wistful old songs the old-fashioned people used to sing.

I wonder what they'll put into the new hymn books—free verse, or jazz?

No, I never was crazy about the old-fashioned hymns myself, not for themselves, but, somehow, whenever I hear one of them I smell the great thunderheads rolling up in the west, and begin to wonder whether it's going to rain just in time to spoil the strawberry festival that the Ladies' Aid Society is giving tonight.

Old Bose, the ragged dog I used to know, wakes up from his long, long sleep, and I hear his stumpy old tail thump on the front porch. And is that the Reber's dog barking, way off there in the twilight?

Mmm, sniff, sniff, Lena must be making ginger bread, for the old-fashioned supper. I wonder if I couldn't get her to give me a good, big piece of it while it is hot and coax a good portion of fresh butter to put on it?

"By cool Siloam's shady rill

"How fair the lily blows.

"Of Sharon's Dewey Rose."

Be still, restless feet. Be quiet, eager heart. Stay still, oh you who are old in sorrow and tired with the world—and listen:

"Of Sharon's Dewy Rose.

"Can't you see the dew. Can't you get the fragrance"—and oh! the voice that sang the old songs, how many aching years it has been silent?

"Come, Ye Disconsolate.

"Where E'er Ye Languish"—dear me! what a mournful old tune, but, somehow, I'd like to hear old Aunt Lucy singing it again.

"How firm a foundation"—poor little old Miss Sally. How she did love to lift her tired head and chant about the firm foundation, that made her feel strengthened and protected, against even the wicked boys, who threw stones at her cat, and stole the ripe cherries from her best cherry tree, right before her very eyes.

Well, maybe it's time they went—the old hymns of faith and resignation—but, somehow, something's going to be gone from the world—when they go.

Some Hints on Cooking Spinach

By MARTHA LEE

NOW PLEASE don't turn this page over quickly and say, "Oh, if she's going to talk about spinach, I'll read the funnies." I am going to preach about spinach again and I want you to listen and like it! You want to be young and beautiful, full of vim and vigor and vitality, don't you? Then you know you must eat your daily quota of leafy foods, and certainly spinach is one of the most important representatives of this class of vegetable.

Martha Lee

But I don't blame you if you if you object to spinach which has been boiled in gallons of water that renders it tasteless and robs it of its vitamins. I've said so many times that spinach should be cooked only in the water which clings to its leaves after washing, that I'm afraid you'll shoot me if I repeat it, but it's Rule No. 1 in the preparation of this vegetable, so rich in iron, iodine, calcium and almost all of the known vitamins.

And next time you have a ham bone (I'm saving mine to collect ants in the garden) allow 1 cup of chopped cooked meat to 1½ cups of chopped spinach and 2 cups of boiled rice. Mix these ingredients and season with 1 tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper and 2 tbsps. grated onion. Turn this mixture into a casserole and pour 2 cups of tomato sauce over all. Bake in a moderate oven at 350 F. until thoroughly heated, then remove, sprinkle with grated cheese and serve.

More recipes for Spinach Cakes with Onion Sauce, Stuffed Onions with Spinach, Scalloped Spinach and Rice, Baked Tomatoes Stuffed with Spinach and Ham, Ham Omelet with Spinach and Creamed Spinach and Eggs on Toast, your on request—and the loose 2c stamp.

Forgive me this time? No more spinach for a whole week—and maybe longer.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

The Murder of the Choir Singer

By ANTHONY ABBOT

LENGEL STRODE through the door, followed by Hutchinson, who looked weary and haggard. But his voice vibrated with enthusiasm as he rattled off his report.

"Landed back here at our field at 8 o'clock this morning. Got right on the job here. Inspector Lengel went with me and we located what we went after. It was Satan's own job to do what you wanted—but we've got the party with us. The matron came along."

Colt looked at his watch.

"Three o'clock," he muttered. "Take them out for a drive. Bring them to No. 13 Sanger ter. at 7 o'clock tonight. That will be a full hour before any of the others get there. Lengel, you arrange to receive them. Put them in the front room on the second floor and keep the door closed and locked, with Hutchinson on guard.

"Not a move after that until I send Tony to bring you in. I don't mind saying that I don't relish this program, but I am afraid it is the only weapon we can use. Lengel, you meet all the others I send to the house tonight and keep them in front reception room on the first floor. I shall send for them as I need them."

Again we are left alone. But my chief gave me no chance to ask curious questions. Instead he called Dougherty on the telephone:

"Good afternoon, Dougherty."

"Hello, Thatcher!"

"How are you coming on?"

"Great! Marvelous! But we'll get somewhere eventually."

Colt chuckled.

"Dougherty, will you join up with me once more?"

"If you think you need me, Thatcher, of course," cried Dougherty, somewhat like relief in his voice.

"Thatcher, what are you planning to pull now?"

"Is it a bargain?"

"Okay, Thatcher, old boy."

Colt was smiling as he replaced the receiver.

FOUR HOURS' START

"I shall arrange for Saunders and the rest to be there," he said. "You had better get started typing your notes, Tony—you have a good fours hours before the last act of this show begins."

That four hours was like a survey of all that had happened since Colt and I had left headquarters on Monday night and driven to the Bellevue dock. A half dozen note books jammed my brief case. On their pages, spread in stenographic pothooks, were records of Colt's examination in the Morgue reception room, at the Arsenal, and then Sangster Terrace, the interrogation of the two families at Colt's home, and all that had followed after.

When I finally looked up from my typewriter again I was still plodding through the first examination of Oswald Curtainwood, and already twilight was looking through my desk window.

There would be no time for dinner. As I settled the oilcloth cover over my typewriter, Colt rose from his desk and swept a mass of papers into the top drawer.

"There is only one answer to this hellish riddle, Tony. I got the first inkling of it from that group photograph. But one link was missing until I received that glove last night. Then the truth became a little clearer—for it smelled of powder stains. We've got to pound pretty hard tonight. I wish I didn't have to do what I am going to do."

We entered No. 13 Sangster Terrace, not through its crimson front door, but by a rear gateway and down the dark corridor on the first floor. Detective Schultz was on guard at the foot of the staircase; he whispered to the commissioner that all the persons wanted were in the front reception room; he had found chairs to make them comfortable.

ELEVEN IN ALL

"How many are there?" asked Colt.

"Eleven—Mrs. Beazeley, the Curtainwood brothers, Willie and Isabel Saunders, Colonel Powell, Bessie Struber, Emma Hicks; Kraus, the caretaker; Ellery Chadwick, and Mrs. Rubble."

"Correct. Where is the District Attorney?"

"What about the front room above?"

"There's somebody in there—but Hutchinson is in front of the door and says he has orders from you—"

"All right."

In a long panel mirror at the foot of the staircase, I saw my own face reflected, nervously pale and ghostlike in the dim light of the corridor. I was a prey to the most unsettling forebodings. As I mounted the steps, I felt as if I were close to a great catastrophe. On the upper landing, Thatcher Colt paused to exchange a few whispered words with Hutchinson. Then we entered again into the room where Timothy Beazeley and Evelyn Saunders had died.

His back to us, Dougherty stood looking soulfully out at the river through the casement windows. Hearing our steps, he turned.

"Thatcher, what have you got up your sleeve?" he demanded at once.

"One last trick. How have you made out?"

"To be honest, not at all. I gave the widow and her brothers the best I had and I still couldn't break their story."

Is Too Young, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a young man about a week ago who is eight years my senior. I am now 16. He has visited me three times in one week and has written me a letter saying he is madly in love with me and would like to go "steady" with him. My father does not have any objection to my having friends, but is quite against my going "steady." For my part I do not care enough for him to have no other friends.

Having no one except my father to consult, I am seeking your advice. How I should tell him without hurting his feelings? SUE.

Dear Sue: Just tell him that you're too young for such an understanding, that he may come to see you sometimes but that your other friends will be welcome, too. In my opinion, my dear Sue, a girl of 16 should be in high school studying so that she may train herself for a good job later on. Even if you marry early, a little education goes a long way toward making life easier.

Always Slams Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a girl for two or three years, and like her very much. But she always slams me when I am in her presence. I would like her to go out with me but am afraid to ask her as she always snubs me. Miss Fairfax, will you please tell me of a way I could win her?

TROUBLED.

Dear Troubled: Perhaps you've been too humble and devoted to this young lady and that's why she "slams" you. Try to be a little more independent. Take some other girl out occasionally, and try a little answering back. Be a little sarcastic and saucy. With some girls, blessings only brighten as they take their flight.

DON'T be confused by the careless expression, "just like Kotex." Perhaps the substitute looks the same. But demand to know more. Where was this substitute made? By whom? How? Who stands back of it? Is it hygienically safe . . . the kind of sanitary pad a hospital would select?

Last year more than 10,000,000 Kotex pads were used in hospitals. This is the pad that meets hospital requirements! You should be equally strict in selecting an accessory so definitely related to health.

Insist on Kotex. It's the world's standard. In addition, Kotex is supremely comfortable. Shaped to fit. Soft—and stays soft. Adjustable. Disposable. May be worn on either side with equal protection.

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Defeated Dynamiter. Jeopardized Dempsey. Rickard Baited Trap.

SAGGING STRANDS SAVED TITLE

The little things oft loom up large in wrestling and the ring
You wouldn't think that sagging ropes would mean a blooming thing.
But Sonny lost his title chance through them the other night,

Little things sometimes loom large. A tiny pebble causing a grounder to take an unexpected hop oftimes has changed the aspect of a ball game. A meal in too close proximity to a fight has been responsible for fighters being knocked out by blows that ordinarily would not feaze them. Ask Jack Sharkey. Early in his career the Garrulous Gob inhaled a man sized meal of Red Mike and Violets about an hour before entering the ring against Romero Rojas in Mechanics Building. Romero slapped Jack in the tummy and Red Mike and Violets started a Civil War. Before the war was over the referee had counted out the Garrulous Gob. Ever since then Jack has crossed corned Willie off the menu on fight day, at least. He found that a hearty meal just before entering the ring was bad for the digestion. Because a little woman needed some dough Jack Dempsey was knocked out by Jim Flynn.

A little thing like a loose rope practically cost Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world the other evening. If you were among the 32,000 fans and fannies that saw The Grapple of The Century you will recall that shortly after the Bull of Belmont and the Lion of the Seine came out for the third and deciding fall Sonny hurled DeGlane to the ropes. Off balance, the Frenchman threw up his arms and half left himself wide open to the flying tackle. Sonnenberg crouched for the spring, half launched himself into the air and then brought himself to a halt with a look of baffled rage.

Many of the fans didn't understand exactly what had happened. Some of the experienced observers saw what had got the goat of Gus the Goat—viz., loose ropes. Ordinarily when Sonnenberg hurles them to the ropes an opponent rebounds in such a fashion as to leave him wide open to the flying tackle. If the strands at Braves Field had been tightened properly DeGlane would have bounced off them and right into the battering ram charge of the Dynamiter. Gus's bullet head would have gone in neck-deep in the Frenchman's mid-section. One "butt" from Gus the Goat under those conditions is sufficient. Had Sonnenberg been able to take proper advantage of that semi-opening last Thursday night he would have finished the Frenchman and won the heavyweight championship of the world. But the ropes sagged, DeGlane rolled over and grasped them—and the opportunity was gone.

Loose ropes were responsible for Luis Firpo, the Wild Bull of the Pampas, knocking Jack Dempsey into Jack Lawrence's lap in their hectic battle at Yankee Stadium. Firpo did not knock Dempsey through the ropes with a punch. He "bulled" him through. It was the impetus of his rush, not the accompanying bear-like cuff, that sent the Manassa Mauler crashing down on the inoffensive scribe and nearly wrecked his typewriter.

Dempsey going through the ropes was one of the high lights of the encounter. It gave the fans the big thrill. It helped to make the contest the soul-stirring battle it really was.

This writer never will believe but that the great Tex Rickard purposely ordered those ropes to be left loose in hope that something would happen as exactly did happen in the Dempsey-Firpo fight. Anyway, before the main bout we noticed the ropes were loose and when Tex strolled up to the ringside and started a conversation we remarked: "Better have those ropes tightened, Tex. One or the other will be knocked through 'em as sure as you're born. That middle rope is so loose that when a scrapper sits on it it goes clear to the floor."

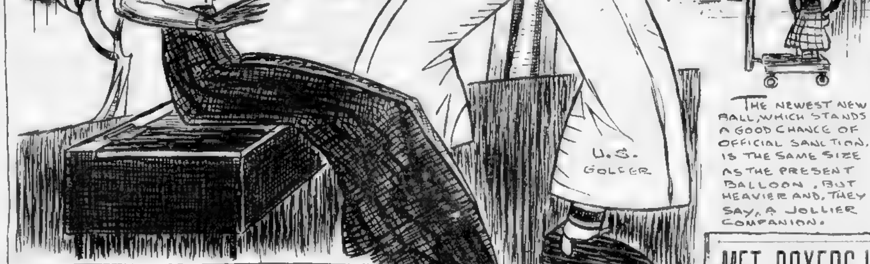

"No, no! I want 'em left the way they are!" snapped Rickard, his thin lips tightening. "I want 'em left the way they are."

It is loose ring strands which are responsible for so many wrestlers plunging through the ropes on to press stand or cement floors nowadays. Whenever the wrestlers want to give the spectators a thrill one of them dives through the ropes or is hurled through them. They wouldn't go through them so frequently if they were tightened. If you watch closely you will see how the ropes break their fall. A properly tightened rope will keep an athlete from going through. A loose rope will sag and leave an opening big enough for a horse to gallop through.

A friend of Jim Reardon's tells him he will not attend any more matches if he has to see wrestlers plunge through the ropes and risk life and limb by collision with the cement floor. He wants a fourth rope added to the wrestling mat. But a fourth rope, and all ropes tightened, would keep wrestlers in the ring. Apparently the promoters don't want 'em there. They don't want 'em there because a majority of the customers don't want 'em there, either. The thrill of seeing a wrestler take a header brings the customers back. It isn't promoter, or wrestlers, or officials, who run the game. It's the customers. As the promoter says:

"What! Put fourth rope into wrestling and keep them on the mat
No more crashing, headlong dives? Now what d'ya think o' that!
When grappler hurtles through the ropes and lands upon his bean
It gives the customers their thrill—now you know what I mean.
Promoter is what I'm supposed to be—I'm only that in name,

Favorite in N. E. Golf Tourney Defeated

After being dormie five, Charles B. Clare of Connecticut took David Lapham, also of Connecticut, to the seventeenth hole where a dead stymie shut him off from a win and the odds-on favorite of the sixth annual New England Amateur Championship was eliminated 2 and 1 in the second round at the Country Club today.

After being two down to Wade Roberts going to the fifth hole Edward Burke of Rhode Island won nine consecutive holes to win the match, 7 and 5.

By BILL GRIMES

Among the 16 casuals of the opening scrimmage for the New England Amateur championship today at the Country Club, were the co-medalists, Billy Donnelly, Jr., State Junior champion, and H. V. Kaler, both of whom were representing Woodland.

After piling up a four-hole advantage going to the eighth Donnelly started to slip to such an extent that Jack Hennessey was one up going to the 17th. Donnelly squared the match at the home hole, where they were both trapped with their second [illegible] Donnelly after getting home with two fine shots at the 19th went out of the championship by three putting the green after Hennessey had chipped back for a sure four.

H. V. Kaler was eliminated by David Lapham from the Woodway Country Club of Conn. After Kaler had fought it out on even [illegible] for nine holes, he took the lead at the 10th, but then Lapham put on a spurt and clinched the match by winning four consecutive holes.

Dolan Turns in Best Round

Dolan played the best golf of the morning. He was out in 35 and even 4s when the match ended on the 16th green. Although Ahearn was out in 35 he was three down to the Winthrop boy. At the fourth hole, Ahearn laid his approach shot dead for a sure birdie but it did him no good as Dolan chipped in of the green for an eagle two.

After being three down at the turn, Ahern picked up two holes the 10th with a par and the 11th with a birdie 4, but Dolan pulled away from him again at the 14th, where he got a nice par 5 and his three at the short 16th was good for a win and the match.

Wade Roberts, the only qualifier from New Hampshire, went to the turn in 36 against Searles Reed of Thorney Lee to be 3 up, but Reed battled along to the 16th hole, where he lowered his colors. Emory Stratton stepped through Eddie Peterson while Marshall Forest eliminated Frank Hersey, Wellesley, 5 and 4.

Forest Beats Sen. Monahan

Forest was out in 36 and five up, while Wilfred Crosley stopped Senator Joseph W. Monahan 4 and 3 and Dick Cuici, Connecticut, won a one up decision from Francis Doyle when the Worcester boy three putted the 18th green.

Joe Batchelder of Salem and A. C. Giles, Connecticut, had a nip and tuck battle, the local player [illegible] winning [illegible] and 1. [illegible] was one up at the turn by [illegible] a win at the eighth [illegible] Giles lost his [illegible] his [illegible] by winning the 10th [illegible] after they halved the next [illegible] hole. Batchelder was unable [illegible] better than a five at the short 16th losing the hole to a four, but [illegible] came back [illegible] and ended the match.

After qualifying by [illegible] a play-off Charlie Webbe of [illegible] Penobscot Valley Country Club Bangor, Maine, put out one of the strongest contenders, Frank [illegible] Goss, 2 up. Ross was a semi-finalist last year in the New England and was expected to [illegible] through this year. His [illegible] tion has softened up the [illegible]

Charles E. Clare, Greenwich Country Club, Orange, Ct., made short work of Fred Hannon of Scarboro, winning 5 and 4. Clare was out in 37 to be three up and was even par for the five inward holes.

Clare did not get off to a very auspicious start for he three putted the first green for a halve but he came back with a 20-foot putt for a birdie and a win at the second hole. He then picked up the third to be two up when Hannon got in trouble which started when he hooked his tee shot.

Clare was trapped from the tee at the seventh, but his four was good enough for a win. The next five holes were halved in par figures, but Clare won the [illegible] winning stride at the 13th, where Hannon failed to get home in two and then Clare ended the match with a par 5 at the long 13th his opponent taking four to get home.

James E. Dolan, Jr., Mass., defeated

NEW BALL WOULD GIVE ADDED DISTANCE

Late this spring a well-known golf ball manufacturer began to distribute a 1.62 ball which it predicted the United States Golf Association will officially adopt next season.

The powers that be decided three years ago that because a very small percentage of golfers were making some of the courses look ridiculously easy by their tremendous distances, a new ball was absolutely necessary.

MAX READY TO FIGHT WALKER IN FEBRUARY

BOUT WOULD BE HELD AT MIAMI

Talking to President William F. Carey, who left a sick bed for a final conference with the champion's manager, Jacobs made the startling announcement that Schmeling is willing to make his first appearance against Mickey Walker at Miami in February.

The second match, provided Schmeling retains the title, would be staged four months later, in June, probably in New York [illegible] Long Island. One match must be run by the Mills Bund in conjunction with the Garden, he added.

Coincident with these proposals, Jacobs forwarded to the National Boxing Association, department of the Garden, transmitted copies of a medical report by the German boxing federation. It bears out earlier reports that [illegible] Schmeling, [illegible] with Paul [illegible] knock-out [illegible]

MORE PRAISE FOR UMPIRES

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP)—President William Harridge of the American League is well satisfied with the umpiring in his organization. In fact, he believes it is the "best in years."

Harridge has just returned from a tour through the eastern end of the circuit, made with Umpire-in-Chief Tom Connolly, for the purpose of checking up on the work of the arbiters.

"The American League now has the best umpiring I have seen in years," he said. "The players themselves apparently appreciate that fact, for in all the games in the East, there was not a protest against any decision by an umpire.

"Connolly has accomplished just what was expected of him when he was appointed chief of staff. From his own experience as an umpire he knows how to handle both the officials and players."

Szabo has been egged on at the Garden one more time than has his rival and he has won every time on the fall-route. He is hoping soon to get another crack at Londos.

Lessons in Wrestling

JAPANESE ARM LOCK AND GRAPEVINE

In today's wrestling lesson GUS SONNENBERG illustrates a very punishing hold, the Japanese arm lock and grapevine. JACK ALBRIGHT is on the receiving end of the punishment.

By GUS SONNENBERG
As Told to GEORGE GRIMM
LESSON NO. 15

The Japanese arm lock and grapevine is a combination of two holds. The Japanese arm lock is a jiu-jitsu hold and was introduced in this country by Tara Miayki.

This combination hold is secured from a standing position getting behind your opponent, reaching over his right shoulder with your right arm, grasping his left wrist with your right hand, drawing his arm upward toward his shoulder, slipping the other hand under the elbow reaching through and grasping your own right wrist with your left hand, then falling backward bringing your opponent with you.

This is a severe punishing combination, wrenching both the arm and shoulder and can be made into a pinning hold by pulling your left leg out from underneath your opponent, thereby permitting his shoulders to touch the mat.

SHAMROCK V WINS CUP

Cowes Isle of Wight, Aug. 4 (AP)—Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V, unsuccessful challenger last year for the America's Cup, today won the King's Cup in the Royal Yacht Squadron's regatta.

No other boat was in sight as the green and white big Shamrock came charging across the finish line and it was five minutes before Herbert Andreas' Candida was seen coming up in second place.

The cup race, most important of the British yachting season, was open to boats of 60 feet or over and was a handicap event.

Both Shamrock and Candida had a time allowance of five minutes, 52 seconds over the scratch boat Westward, a big schooner.

His Majesty's Britannia originally was entered to compete for second prize only but was withdrawn when the second mate was swept overboard yesterday and drowned.

Roslindale, Giants Win in Twi League

Roslindale defeated North Cambridge, 8 to 4, at Billings field, last night, and the Providence Colored Giants nosed Dorchester, 5 to 1, at Dorchester Town field, in the two games played in the Boston Twilight League.

Moss Goes to Cards by Waiver Route

Ray Moss, pitcher, whom the Braves obtained from Brooklyn two months ago, was relegated to the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday on waivers. Moss' record while with the Tribesmen included one victory and three defeats.

SLATTERY ENDS TRAINING

New York, Aug. 4 Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo, who meets Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight, in a 15-round bout tomorrow night at Ebbets Field, scarcely looked like the next titleholder as he began tapering off at a midtown gymnasium.

For all his weeks of intensive training up at Speculator, the challenger appeared to be in none too good condition to the fight fans and newspapermen who watched his brief workout. The Buffalo boy appeared to indifferent advantage against a pair of sparring mates.

His midsection heavily encased in rubber and woolen padding, calculated to remove—or perhaps, protect—a conspicuous roll of fat, Slattery boxed four easy rounds, neither giving nor receiving any punishment to speak of. There was nothing in the exhibition, at any rate, to affect the current odds of 6 to 5 on Rosenbloom.

In the midst of Slattery's workout there was a wild rumor that the champion was on his way to the gymnasium to get in a few licks on the punching bags and generally tune up for the defense of his title, but he failed to materialize. However, so far as anyone has been able to learn, has confined his training exclusively to night clubs

PLAYERS GO FISHING HEAVY RADIO MAIL

SOX-YANKS BATTLE ON HIGH SEAS

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP)—The American League headquarters today gave Earl Webb, Boston outfielder, an official total of 50 doubles instead of 51 with which he was unofficially credited.

Statisticians explained that the discrepancy occurred May 1 when unofficial scorekeepers gave Webb a double where the official Boston scorer in the game with Washington credited him with a single.

By JOE CASHMAN

The Red Sox and those Yankees who don't have to make a tiresome trip to Springfield to engage in an exhibition contest will resume hostilities on the high seas today, using fishing rods for bats and buoys for bases.

Big Ed Morris, the Alabama bearcat, is responsible for this hot Southern drawl, the Sox pitcher recently announced that while he might not be the most effective flinger in the league, he sure was the nearest approach in either circuit to Izaak Walton, most famous of anglers.

So today, Big Ed will attempt to defend his claim of being the world's champion angler against Manager John "Shano" Collins, Coach "Rudy" Bulswitt, all of his playing mates, as many of the Yanks as Joe McCarthy will excuse and a goodly crowd of New York and Boston baseball writers.

Fred Hoey Will Act as Referee

Fred Hoey, popular radio announcer, will be the chaperone and referee. The boys will match their wits with all the fishes who happen in the path of the craft between Atlantic ave. and Boston lighthslip and if Big Ed can finish out front in the test, it will have to be admitted that he is even better than he boasts.

Ed isn't particularly keen about showing up any of his mates, all good friends of his, but he is determined not to let up for a sec and on his New York rivals. He wants revenge for that hammering he suffered at the hands of the Yankees in the eighth inning of yesterday's game, which the Sox lost 9 to 8.

Coming into the game in the seventh, when the Sox were trailing 6 to 2, because of the inability of Shino and Hallahan to pitch effectively, Big Ed set the enemy down scoreless and had visions of chalking up a win when his mates put over two more markers in their half of the "lucky" frame.

In the eighth, though, he played the cousin role so well that the Yanks put over three more tallies before Justin McLaughlin, Brighton youngster, was rushed in to retire the side.

And while the Red Sox scored four runs in the last of the eighth, they fell one short of winning, because of Morris' failure to come through in the pinch.

It was a wild ball game

Pitchers Have Tough Time in Fray

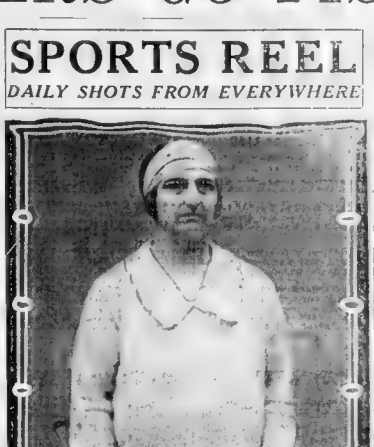

The Yanks got off to a three-run lead in the first two innings before Shino was relieved by Hallahan. The Sox picked up their first run off Ed Wells, veteran Yankee southpaw, in the third and added another in the fourth, but were still two behind as the enemy scored three more in the seventh in the first of the latter frame.

The Yanks picked up two more off Durham in the sixth but the Sox got them back and drove Wells from the hill in the seventh.

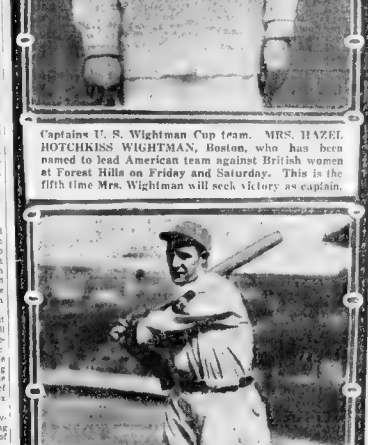

Morris preceded Hallahan to give three runs and the Sox scored four off Henry Johnson and forced Lefty Grove to relieve. He held them in the opening game of the series, to return and check 'em again.

Captains U. S. Wightman Cup team. MRS. HAZEL HOTCHKISS WIGHTMAN, Boston, who has been named to lead American team against British women at Forest Hills on Friday and Saturday. This is the fifth time Mrs. Wightman will seek victory as captain.

Getting closer to record. EARL WEBB, record-hitting Red Sox right fielder, hit his 50th and 51st doubles of the season yesterday to bring him within 11 of upsetting the old mark of 64 set by George Burns. Webb has 53 more games in which to do it.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY—

I am going up to Worcester tonight to see Jim Browning try to lick Henri Deglane, world heavyweight wrestling champion. Browning and Deglane will mix it in the Fair Grounds under the auspices of Jack McGrath . . . Mr. McGrath was formerly a wrestler himself. I hate to see Jack in some of his angle efforts. He used to take the average run of heavyweight grapplers and wrap them up much as a grocery store clerk does paper and twine. Mr. McGrath was always a fearless fellow, and even at his present age, isn't afraid of anything that walks on two feet.

Mr. Boston

"This will be the second time that McGrath has offered a Browning-DeGlane bout to Worcester fans. Browning started wrestling in Worcester four months ago. His top body scissors soon made him a red hot favorite with the fans. It was only natural that there should be a demand for a bout between Jim and DeGlane.

"When the contest was staged, it was found that Browning possessed enough tricks in his bag to make things mighty interesting for the champion. Ringside observers say that Browning was having slightly the better of the milling when he was tossed from the ring. Jim was injured so badly it was necessary to treat him at a Worcester hospital.

"Browning went after a return match with DeGlane as soon as he resumed wrestling. Jack McGrath has given him another large opportunity. I feel Browning will prove the good account of himself.

Snyder Should Give Schaaf Hard Bout

"Matchmaker Billy Ames of the Boston Garden continues to bat out first class attractions. He hasn't had a bloomer since he took over the matchmaking job at the North Station sport palace. The Schaaf-Maloney, the Bernard-Delle, Brouillard-Thompson, Fuller-Canzoneri and Cohen-Battalino bouts were Bill's chief offerings.

"Now Ames has arranged a tussle between Schaaf and Angus Snyder, which will take place in the Garden next Tuesday night. Harold Ripple manages Snyder. He tells me Angus floats harder than Schaaf, is every bit as big and strong as the Wrentham warrior, and that he is certain to come crashing through with a victory next Tuesday night.

"Now, Ripple tells me he has added Jimmy Hill, welterweight champion of the Philippines, Carlos Milling, Jr., lightweight champion of the Orient, and Young Tonnis, bantamweight champion of the Philippines, to his list of battlers.

Villa Best Fighter to Come From Philippines

"Pancho Villa was the greatest fighting machine to come from the Philippines, Frank Churchill was operating a stadium at Manila when Villa came in from a sugar cane plantation looking for a job. Churchill employed him to sweep up around his stadium Pancho later took up boxing and became the world's flyweight champion.

"I was at the ringside in the Polo Grounds the night Villa wrested the championship from Jimmy Wilde. He gave Wilde one of the most savage beatings I ever handed out in the ring. The referee permitted the bout to continue when Wilde was helpless, unable to hold up his hands, so that British fans could not charge that the little Welshman was robbed of his title. Wilde at the time he fought Villa was only a shell of his former self.

"Villa had tremendous pull at the box office. He was a gold mine for the promoters.

"Villa died from septic poisoning caused by an ulcerated tooth. "If Kay Alvin can find a Filipino boxer who is half as good a fighter as Villa was, he will be satisfied."

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

It didn't do the Senators much good to win two in a row from the Athletics. The world's champions came back to take both ends of Monday's twin-bill from the Nationals and to once more increase their lead to 12 full games. "Lefty" Grove won his thirteenth straight and 22nd victory of the season in the opener while George Earnshaw accounted for the nightcap.

Mill Gaston looked very good while eating the Yanks down in order in the ninth inning of Monday's game at the Fens. Had he been in shape all season, the Sox would now be fighting for a first division berth instead of battling to keep out of the basement, and if he can pitch winning ball for the rest of the way, the team isn't likely to drop any lower than sixth.

Earl Webb now needs but 14 doubles to break George Burns' record of 64 and has 53 games in which to get them. It doesn't seem as though he could miss. Incidentally, our slugging fly-chaser has made 142 hits to date, which is more than any rival in either league with the exception of Al Simmons has banged out.

Falmouth's Streak Broken by Chatham

Chatham, Aug. 4—Chatham brought Falmouth's six-game winning streak to an abrupt end here yesterday when it hammered out a 14-2 win. The home team touched Al Blanche for 15 hits, including a home run by George Colbert with two men on base.

The former Wareham pitcher also issued eight passes. Walter Kleson, another Somerville boy, led the attack on Blanche, with three hits.

Johnny Murphy, who, like Blanche is a former Somerville high hurler, held the losers to five hits, two of which were doubles by Blanche. Jerry Pagliuca hit another triple for Falmouth.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

Editor's Note. "Anybody could write a column" said Horace Heidt the other day when I was visiting him in his dressing room at the Met. "All right," sez I, go ahead and write me a column if you think it's so easy." And so he did. Here it is—by HORACE HEIDT.

OWED BY HORACE

I like it.
It leaves a taste that's murky brown,
I like it.
With adenoids and owlish glare
And manage to get nowhere.
I like it.

Its streets are dank and narrow
The East Wind cuts to the marrow,
I like it.
Its laws appall its censors gall,
I like it.
A virgin saint and lush with crime
It has a heart that's big as time,
I like it.

Yes, Boston is a country town,
I like it.
An artisan who wears a crown,
I like it.
It's prose, free verse and jingling rhyme,
I like it.

* * *

THE HEIDT OF NONSENSE

Our business in Boston has only been "Marvelous" so far—but I have every hope it will get better as we go along . . . I asked a Boston friend of mine yesterday if he thought there was a great deal of difference between major and minor league baseba . . . "I don't know," he replied. "I've only lived in Boston 10 years . . . The 15 men in our orchestra started out with ambitions to be doctors, lawyers, engineers—all the professions, in fact, were represented in their embryonic ideas at college—and they turned out to be musicians . . . Oh, well, it's more fun anyway . . . Each man in the orchestra plays an average of 26 and one-half instruments—all right if you don't believe me, the entire band plays 396 instruments; divide that by the number of men in the band and see what answer you get. Incidentally, the Californians are the only outstanding band that can be called an 'Alma Mater' band for they are all graduates of the University of California . . . Of course, some wise-cracker may ask, "How about Lobo, the dog?" . . . Well, just for your information, Lobo took a summer course at the University Extension School!

* * *

MONTE CARLO

The greatest thrill the boys have had since we left college came when we played in Monte Carlo a year or so ago . . . They served us with a huge tray of beer after each set of numbers we played . . . But it soon became too much of a good thing and we begged em to substitute tea for the beer . . . They wouldn't let us try our luck at the games of chance at the Casino while we were there, either . . . Probably that was a break for us after all.

It was at Monte Carlo, too, that the King of Denmark was insulted, quite unintentionally, of course. Jerry Bowser, who looks like Joe Brown, found a French roll in the bell of his horn during one of the shows . . . He thought that I had stuffed it in there as a joke, so he took it out and threw it at me. I saw it coming, ducked, and it hit the King, who was sitting nearby, squarely on the head. . . Then came the job of apologizing and squaring ourselves . . . Luckily, the King was a good scout and took it as a joke rather than resenting the incident.

THINGS I LIKE IN BOSTON

The hospitality of its people . . . The fact that English is spoken here as though the people were born to it . . . The finest hotels outside of N. Y. . . . The sea food . . . The fact that neither of the Boston ball clubs are in the cellar this year (I hope I haven't spoken too soon!) . . . The East Wind . . . The chic of the Boston Girl . . . The courtesy of your police . . . The geniality of Gov. Ely and Mayor Curley . . . That wonderful breathing spot the Common, the Frog Pond, the Public Gardens and the swan boats.

* * *

THINGS I DON'T LIKE

Its narrow streets . . . The complicated traffic system . . . The noonday crowds on the streets . . . The failure of downtown restaurants to provide linen on the tables—paper napkins are prevalent everywhere and I hate 'em . . . The ads on the front pages of the newspapers . . . The days when the East Wind doesn't blow . . . Men who stand on street corners and block pedestrian traffic . . . Women who do the same thing.

* * *

ECONOMY NET IS $282,434 FOR YEAR

Economy Grocery Stores Corp. report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1931, shows net profit after all charges including depreciation and taxes of $282,434, equivalent to $2.35 a share on 120,000 shares. This compares with a net profit in preceding fiscal year of $336,346 or $2.80 a share and 1928-29 net of $271,551, or $2.71 a share on 100,000 shares.

Sales	$17,861,195	$17,857,429
Gross profit on sales	3,423,506	2,965,061
Other income	86,426	90,240

Net profit	282,434	336,346
Dividends	120,000	109,606
Surplus	162,434	226,040
P & L surplus*	116,235	409,157

*After adjustments

Balance sheet as of June 30, 1931, shows current assets of $1,726,266 and current liabilities of $675,246, leaving working capital of $1,051,020 compared with $1,035,430 the year before.

"During the year, 38 single unit stores were relocated or enlarged. In December, 1930, a department food store was opened in Hyde Park. A similar store was opened in April, 1931, in Allston. In May, 1931, the M. Brown chain of 21 stores was acquired.

"Depreciation was $76,023, against $59,060 last year and $43,706 in the year previous. Your company absorbed during the year all inventory shrinkages due to commodity price declines. It is hardly reasonable to expect further declines. Once prices become more stabilized your company is in an excellent position to benefit and show its normal earning power."

CAPTIVE DIVES INTO RIVER

With them was another prisoner, John Reyden of Saugus, an alleged vagrant, and two court officers, Thomas Carr and Leo Milder, who was driving the sedan being used as a court van.

The auto had stopped at the North Grove st. entrance to the city yards, leading to the jail gate, when Baker freed himself of the handcuffs, opened the door and leaped out.

He ran down North Grove st., through Fruit st., and down Charles st. to the boathouse at the foot of Arlen st. He dived in and began removing his clothing, piece by piece.

The court officers and pedestrians who had joined in the chase shouted at him from the rail of the embankment and finally attracted the attention of three men in as many rowboats on the basin.

The boatmen rowed toward Baker and one bolder than the others, pulled alongside, reached down and drew him into the boat.

Baker stood up and punched his captor on the jaw knocking him into the bottom of the boat. Then he jumped overboard and began swimming again.

The men in the other boats viewed this proceeding with something akin to trepidation and drew away from the swimmer.

By this time Sergt. William C. Martin of the Charles River Dam station had procured a boat and there was no hesitancy in his actions. He yanked Baker from the river, nearly exhausted, rowed him to shore and rushed him to the hospital.

NEW ENGLAND TEXTILE MOVE IS UNUSUAL

By FRANK H. MELOON

Announced plan of Bigelow Sanford, New England carpet maker, to seek listing in New York is unusual for the group. Only a quartet of New England textiles are listed on the Boston Stock Exchange, and only one or two traded on the local curb. Most transactions take place "over the counter." At the start of the so-called "Coolidge bull market" a movement was under way favored by bankers, to list more New England textiles, but for a number of reasons it failed to progress. The future is likely to see some change in this respect.

* * *

Dr. Julius Klein of Cambridge, assistant secretary of commerce, in the current issue of Boston Business, published by the Boston Chamber of Commerce, points out that the business decline in New England has been less severe than in other sections. The fact has been repeatedly noted in this column, in fact we have more than once called the former Harvard authority's attention to it with local pride which we trust is pardonable under the circumstances.

Dr. Julius Klein

* * *

One of the most important of the business indices is that of the consumption of electric power by industries, and this has time and again in recent weeks showed the superiority of New England's showing. The diversity of our industries makes for general strength. The old car loadings index, once first in value, is of less consequence than formerly, because no ample record is kept of the transportation of goods in automotive vehicles.

Earnings reports are by no means all bad. One of this week's pleasing reports is the disclosure that Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., had earned $2.64 a share on its class "A" stock for the period January 1 to July 12, inclusive against dividend requirements of only 87½ cents a share.

* * *

Strong pool in Chrysler has naturally been boosting the stock largely on hopes for the new Plymouth, rival of Ford and Chevrolet, outputs of the two strongest automotive factors. It is interesting to know that when Walter Chrysler sought to have the name Plymouth registered the federal authorities first refused permission on the ground that it shouldn't be commercialized, or something of that sort. Later they had a change of heart finding it had already been used in connection with many food products, etc., not to mention a prominent breed of poultry.

* * *

Brazilian government's destruction by fire of 105,000,000 pounds of coffee to reduce the surplus indicates the world has not yet reached a Utopian stage of intelligence. Surely this coffee could have been devoted to better uses while so much poverty exists in many parts of the earth. The Red Cross or some like agency could surely have found proper means of disposing of it without injuring the world market.

Note that President Matt B. Jones' forward-looking New England Telephone & Telegraph will finance advertising in 20 newspapers throughout Massachusetts of advantages of the State as playground center for vacationists. Mr. Jones is a New Englander by birth as well as education, residence and experience, and can be depended upon to boost this section consistently.

Jersey Standard's Fuel Oil Reduced

New York, Aug 4—Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey has made a reduction of five cents a barrel in fuel oil and Diesel oil at North Atlantic and Gulf coast ports. The new price of bunker fuel is 75 cents in New York harbor and 60 cents on the Gulf, while Diesel oil is priced at $1.45 in New York and $1.30 on the Gulf.

Brokerage Office on Pacific Liner

William Cavalier & Co., members of New York Stock Exchange, will maintain brokerage office on Dollar Steamship Co.'s new liner, President Hoover. This will be the first brokerage office on a Pacific liner.

Tobacco Is Paying Initial Dividend

Continental Tobacco Co. has declared an initial dividend of 37 cents a share on its capital stock of record Aug. 15. Over 99 per cent of the 300,000 outstanding shares are owned by Philip Morris Consolidated.

London Rubber Stocks Increase

London, Aug. 4—Stocks of crude rubber Aug. 1 totaled 81,335 tons, an increase of 231 over preceding week. Liverpool stocks totaled 34,551 tons, an increase of 346 over preceding week.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Favorite professionals dominated most of the trading in Wall Street today with the market again dull. Although changes were moderate through nearly all the session, traders interested in operations for the upside withdrew when they saw favorite bear targets working lower.

Steels Are Lowered on Operations Drop

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem were quickly lowered around 2 points today when advices came from Youngstown that current operations had subsided to 33 per cent of capacity against 42 per cent at the start of the week. Republic Steel has suspended melting operations in its open hearth furnaces. Activity at some tin plate mills has improved however. The major steels rallied in late short covering.

Anaconda, Kennecott Both Sell Lower

Coppers were under pressure on announcement that the export price of the red metal had been reduced to 8 cents and that domestic copper was obtainable as low as 7½ cents a pound. Anaconda and Kennecott both sold lower.

"What Will Bears Pay for Covering?"

American Telephone was again lower today, with further selling by the bears on the theory that the dividend is likely to be cut, since U. S. Steel made a slash. "What will the bears pay for covering?" is a query frequently heard. The stock at its price exists on light having demand and has been earning above its current dividend requirements. Comparison with U. S. Steel is considered by many to be poorly made.

Standard Brands Is Acting Better

Comparative steady market for Standard Brands is taken to indicate that interests close to the management foresee improvement in its business outlook. Although aggressive sponsorship has been lacking, accumulation of the stock has been progressing on a modest scale. In this connection the point is stressed that the company earned 2 cents more for the stock in the second quarter of the year than 12 months ago and that the improvement continued on about the same ratio during July.

Prediction Made of Dividend Earned

Predictions now being made are to the effect that the $1.20 dividend on Standard Brands be earned this year, after absorption of all remaining expenses incurred when the corporation was organized.

New York Central Dividend Outlook

Eight per cent yield on New York Central reflects nervousness over the $6 dividend, but buying of impressive character takes place in the stock on all price setbacks. At its old low, now only a few points under present price, Central would still yield 7 per cent on a $5 dividend, and to date the lowest estimates of income for the railroad this year have not gone much below $5 a share.

Loew's Favored by Pool Efforts

Strength in Loew's reflects in the main aggressive sponsorship by a bull pool, although some outside buying has been attracted by the company's strong position in its industry.

Best & Co. Covering Its Dividend Needs

Earnings of Best & Co, planning to enter Greater Boston, are running at a rate sufficient to cover the common dividend by a wide margin. Interests conversant with the company's affairs anticipate that 1931 net will approximate and perhaps slightly exceed last year's showing of $4.15 of a share. On this basis continuation of the $2 payment seems assured. Incidentally, there has been some talk of an increase in the rate. Conservatism of the management, however, makes this appear rather doubtful.

United Corp. Near to Support Point

Bendix Aviation Has New Product

Special attention being paid to Bendix Aviation is based on expectation that company will shortly add a new clutch device to its regular line. Officials of the company are said to be highly impressed by the possibilities of the new product. It is said that Bendix's close affiliation with General Motors practically guarantees a real outlet for the device.

model A, but it will be a four-cylinder car, and the company has no immediate plans for an eight. Employment during shutdown is in assembly line, and in changing over machinery in line with improvements in model.

Motor Stocks Nine Per Cent Above June Low Point

The motor stocks have undergone drastic deflation of prices during the bear market, but during the past month have recovered about 9 per cent from the extreme lows reached early in June.

Standard Statistics' index of 13 representative motor stocks stood at 105 on July 8, compared with 96 on June 3 and compared with a probably approximates $3,000,000 in March. The recovery has been a fluctuating one, with alternate periods of advance followed by quick declines.

The net result of the price movements in the past four weeks however, has been a moderate though noticeable gain.

Utilities Lowered in Curb Dealings

New York, Aug 4—Curb stocks gave ground steadily for the greater part of a dull trading session today, with special pressure against the utility group serving to bring out offerings in other sections of the market. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore was outstandingly weak, sinking almost 3 points. Duke Power dropped 2, American Gas & Electric lost 1⅛, North American Light & Power was off 1 and Electric Bond & Share was off approximately a point at its low.

Chicago & Alton Stricken Off List

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—The New York Stock Exchange has stricken from the list Chicago & Alton Railroad Co. common and preferred stocks. The road recently was purchased at a receiver's sale by the Baltimore & Ohio, which had purchased much of the outstanding C. & A. bonds. This left the stock with no equity in the property.

STOCKS LOWER IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, Aug. 4—Securities markets were dragged a little lower by heaviness of the railroad issues in another apathetic day in Wall st. today.

Stocks recovered a little in the afternoon, but gave way somewhat again in the final dealings. The more speculative carrier obligations in the bond market were under considerable pressure. The commodity markets were also inclined to sag, and new lows were touched by wheat and cotton futures.

CHANGES ARE NARROW

Changes in stocks were largely limited to fractions, but there were some losses of 1 to 5 at the finish. Case and American Can, after declining 1½ and 2 points to new lows, recovered. U. S. Steel and American Telephone regained about half of extreme losses of 2 and 3 points.

International Harvester actually gained 1½. In the rails, Union Pacific, Atchison and New Haven lost about 4 to 5 points, and there were several declines of a point or so.

Pere Marquette prior preferred, an infrequently traded issue, appeared 9 points lower. Miscellaneous issues closing off a point or so included Bethlehem Steel, Liggett & Myers B, American Tobacco B, Johns Manville and Standard of California. The turnover was only about three-quarters of a million shares.

There were no specific developments in the railroad situation to account for the further heaviness in that group, but the feeling in Wall Street that there will be several more reductions in railroad dividends before the year is out remains a heavy weight upon these issues, as well as the feeling in some quarters that the railroad wage situation may come to the fore before the carriers' earning power turns up much.

News of banking difficulties in Mexico added to the somewhat bearish atmosphere, but Wall Street had largely discounted that situation when the country returned to a silver monetary basis several days ago.

As a matter of fact, advices to Wall Street indicated that the Banco Nacional de Mexico, a French capitalized institution, which experienced a run, would be taken care of. It was also reported that the Credito Espanol de Mexico, a Spanish capitalized bank in Mexico, which failed to open its doors yesterday, would reopen within a fortnight.

All in all, the United States' stake in Mexico is considerably less important than it was when Mexico was a larger producer of petroleum.

WHEAT RESTRICTIONS

The new lows in wheat were connected with more rigid restrictions against imports of wheat, which dashed hopes of any important disposal of the American surplus through any special arrangement with that country.

There is still said to be a good prospect that Germany will take a substantial amount of American cotton and copper on special terms, although the copper producers here have not manifested any enthusiasm over disposing of any considerable amount of metal at current prices.

The export price of metal was reduced to 8 cents today, bringing it in line with a domestic price of 7¾ cents. Some of the larger producers are staying completely out of the market at these unprofitable prices.

Raw steel production in the Youngstown area, which recently pushed up to 42 per cent of capacity, are now said to be back to 33 per cent, or only slightly better than the latest estimates for the industry at large, 32 per cent.

The recent upturn at Youngstown, however, had not been interpreted as anything more than temporary, as the steel situation as a whole has failed to indicate any definite turn for the better much before September.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Aug. 4 (INS)—Grains closed generally lower today. Wheat was down ⅛ to ⅜c, corn ⅛c up to ⅛c off and oats ⅛ to ⅜c lower. Rye was ⅛ to ⅜c lower. Wheat futures all scored new lows on the crop, scattered selling being the main influence for the downfall. Cash wheat sold at the lowest on record.

Cotton Steady in New York Market

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—Cotton futures today closed steady; unchanged to 3 points higher. Oct. 8.23-25, Dec. 8.46, Jan. 8.53, March 8.79-80, May 8.94-96, July 9.06. Spot steady; middling 8.15.

Foreign Exchanges Market Tone Easy

Great Britain demand, 4.84 9-16; cables, 4.85 13-16; 60-day bills, 4.81⅝; France demand, 3.92 1-16; cables, 3.92 3-16; Italy demand, 5.22⅞; cables, 5.23¼. Demands: Belgium, 13.95; Germany, 23.65.

Gains Revealed in Auburn Shipments

New York, Aug. 4—Auburn Automobile Co. July shipments were 2530 Auburn and Cord cars, against 3203 in June and 846 in July, 1930; seven months' shipments, 30,210, or 16,549 more than the entire year 1930.

Bank Rate Raised

National Bank of Czechoslovakia has raised its discount rate 1 per cent to 5 per cent.

CLAUDE NEON LIGHTS

W. M. K., South Braintree—I am interested in Claude Neon Lights. Please tell me something about the company. Do you think they will pay a dividend soon?

Ans.—Although Claude Neon Lights' 1930 gross sales ($15,349,497) were almost equal to those in the previous year ($15,778,893), profits were smaller, having amounted to $0.58 a share on 1,053,004 shares, as against $1.05 earned on a slightly smaller number of units in 1929, reports Standard Statistics.

Indications are that earnings this year will closely approximate those of 1930.

Dividend payments are unlikely for the time being. Whereas, current liabilities were considerably in excess of net quick assets at the end of 1930, it is reported that this condition has been somewhat improved and it is understood that new financing is contemplated.

This company, or its subsidiaries and licensees, manufacturers and installs electrical lighting devices, employing neon and other gases, used mainly for advertising and display purposes.

Although certain fundamental patents (secured from the French originators) are about to expire, these have been supplemented by others and the company has likewise perfected and will shortly market bulbs for general lighting purposes, as well as therapeutic lamps.

UNITED STATES RUBBER

N. L., Brookline. I have 25 shares United States Rubber preferred at a substantial loss. Is it worth holding?

Ans.—United States Rubber preferred is a speculation favored by some. No dividends have been paid since first quarter of 1928, though the previous record was unusually good. Operations for 1930 resulted in a net loss of $18,064,000, contrasted with net income of $578,000 in 1929. In the first quarter of current year the company did not quite earn depreciation charges. Tire sales for the first five months showed a substantial increase over similar period in 1930. What the ultimate effect of such increase will be on this year's earnings could not be determined now.

For 24 weeks ended June 20, net was $1.25 a share, a sharp increase over 12 cents a share reported for 28 weeks ended June 30, 1930. The company operates close to 5000 grocery stores throughout the Middle West and has paid cash dividends from March 1, 1928.

DIVIDEND OMITTED

J. J., Cambridge—What do you think of Childs? I have 25 shares at higher levels.

EXPORT COPPER PRICE LOWER

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—The price of export copper was reduced a quarter of a cent a pound today to 8 cents, c. i. f. European base ports.

Some custom smelters have been offering the metal in small quantities recently, however, at 7⅝ cents and it was reported in the trade that some copper from smelters was available yesterday at 7½ cents, although it was not learned whether any sales had been made at that figure.

Busy as Bees and Every Worker a Family Man

This technicolor photograph shows the enormous new six-acre addition to our fast growing production plant—a modern sunlit unit devoted exclusively to retreading slightly-used mother-in-law jokes. The raw material used in our mother-in-law gigs contains many harmful ingredients. Everybody knows how to purifies. That is why we submit all our mother-in-law whimmies to what we call the hotsy-totsy test. By this vulcanizing process all dirty old mother-in-law gags reach you containing less than .08 per cent benzoate of soda. Ain't that sumthin'?

Illinois Manufacturers' Association reports that plant employes who have music at meal time go back to work better able to produce.

But what we'd like to know is whether or not they go back to work sooner.

CHARLIE LOSER IN LOVE AS BOY

howling mobs with shaking sides left the theater after Charlie's appearance with Fred Karno's comedians on Broadway.

He returned to England and to Hetty.

BUT HETTY HAD GONE

Two years later, he returned to America, his first love-affair a tender and regretful memory.

But ever awake in his mind was Hetty and his love for her. He refused to believe she had gone out of his life. He hoped some day to find her, recapture her love and drop into her lap the fortune that Fate had presented him.

It wasn't until after the World War that the ill-fated Charlie heard news about Hetty that darkened and saddened his visit home.

Hetty had married and was now dead.

PAID HER TRIBUTE

Tears came to Charlie's eyes when he was told of her death. Immediately he sought Kennington Gate—alone, to go back in the comfort of memories, to re-experience and recapture those few happy moments that he enjoyed with Hetty.

He wrote:

"Kennington Gate—'twas here, my first appointment with Hetty. How I was dolled-up in my little, tight-fitting frock coat, hat and cane! I was quite the dude as I watched every street car until 4 o'clock, waiting for Hetty to step off, smiling as she saw me waiting.

"I get out and stand there for a few moments at Kennington Gate. My taxi driver thinks I am mad. But I am forgetting taxi drivers. I am seeing a lad of 19, dressed to the pink, with fluttering heart, waiting, waiting for the moment of the day when he and happiness walked along the road. The road is so alluring now. It beckons for another walk and as I hear a street car approaching I turn eagerly, for the moment almost expecting to see the same trim Hetty step off, smiling.

"The car stops, but no Hetty. Hetty is gone. So is the lad with the frock coat and cane."

That, he didn't—

(A short but intense romance existed between Marie Doro, English actress and Charlie. Miss Doro, who monopolized many graces and much beauty, monopolized Charlie for a spell and almost caused him to miss his train. Their romance will be told completely in tomorrow's Boston American.)

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Large quantities of crude and smoking opium were found secreted in the most inaccessible places and seized by the United States customs special duty squad, working under direction of Thomas Finnegan, in the quarters of the Chinese members of the crew of the Dutch tanker Marpessa, unloading oil at the Beacon Oil Co., Everett. Six pounds of crude opium, apparently overlooked by other customs men in United States ports, and one pound of smoking opium were found after a stem to stern search of the ship. Owners of the ship will be fined $25 for every ounce seized.

SCHOONER SAFE

The schooner Henry H. Chamberlain was towed in to Portland by the Coast Guard Cutter Active, according to advices from the port. She was damaged in the storm Saturday night.

Judges Are to Blame

For Concord Reformatory Conditions

If the Wickersham Committee had been utterly accurate, impartial and consistent in its condemnation of conditions at the Concord Reformatory, it would have placed the blame more directly at the door of our judges.

The Concord Reformatory was intended by the State to be just what its name implies, a reformatory for young men guilty of a single indiscretion against society who were to be reformed into useful citizens, not to be converted into hardened criminals.

But the judges, over a period of years, have filled the place with the latter type, convicted of crimes after long careers of criminality.

They have listened to the appeals of politicians. They have conferred favors upon the agents of criminals looking for a "soft place" in which to live out their sentences. They have shown little or no knowledge of penal conditions and problems. The result has been they have increased criminality and retarded reform.

Some day the people will take away from the judges their arbitrary right to sentence men and women to certain institutions of which they themselves have no immediate or expert knowledge.

The judges will be left to render the verdict of guilty and the term of sentence. And to experts versed in knowledge and experience will be left the serious decision of whether the prisoner shall be sent to a place of detention or to a place in which he can be morally refitted to resume an honorable life again.

We are guilty of many economic wastes. But there is none more expensive than that which converts reformable men into professional criminals to prey upon society.

Raising American Flag

Jobs More Effective Against Reds

Subversive propaganda thrives on hard times, when men with families to support become desperate. A successful revolution was never started on a full dinnerpail.

Marie Antoinette, when they begged for bread, told them to eat cake. They overthrew the monarchy and cut off a few heads.

Happily, the vast majority of our people are at work. And we have humane employers and progressive State and city administrations doing their best to take the others out of the bread line and furnish them productive employment.

A community that can afford $65,000 for a wrestling match, with entertainment and charity as the combined motive, and that can send 40,000 people to a baseball game on Sunday can be said to be a long way from a civil uprising.

The children, when they raise the flag, will scarcely know what it is all about. They will have to rely upon the mental integrity of the tutors who explain to them.

It would be unwise to fill their little hearts with hatred for any class of people in America. Instead of teaching them anger for the insignificant group who call themselves Communists, they should learn that the flag stands for the patriotism of the founders of the country, who took care of the people at home instead of traipsing around the world to solve the problems of others who know their own problems best and who are unconcerned in what happens to America.

'Man Without a Country'

Why Not Deport a Few Bandits?

England refuses to accept him, and ships him back to Boston. Immigration officials here unravel reams of red tape, wondering what to do about him now. Peter will live on the government, get his name in the newspapers and enjoy a good rest for himself.

Why on earth immigration officials pick out isolated cases without merit and strain their brains, or such as they possess, when the streets are filled with bandits, gunmen, procurers, dope pedlars and active enemies of society is a mystery which cannot be explained in commonsense.

The Capones, the Lingles and the others run the law off its feet, and public officials treat and deal with them as if they were the pampered sons of the rich, licensed by wealth, social prestige or political influence to flaunt the statutes which apply to decent American citizens.

Justice was pictured in the past as a virtuous woman, blindfolded, with an even scales in her hands. Modern officialdom, inept or corrupt, or both, would make a trollop out of her, a common gold-digger without virtue.

Navy Yard Needs Work

What it needs is not a promise against dissolution but some steps to recondition that will supply the workmen with work.

Nor will America ever feel safe on blue prints and paper ships. Steel and munitions are the best insurance against war, worth a million times what they cost. Ask Belgium.

When Mr. Adams sails his fine yacht out of The Glades and across the bay, he might think of the story of the two girls who tended the Scituate lighthouse during the war of 1812.

At the approach of the English fleet, one girl seized a flute and played martial, marching tunes. The other lustily beat a drum. When the strains of military music wafted on the breeze, the officers turned the ships and put out to sea, instead of landing and sacking the rich town.

It was the possible PRESENCE of an army they feared. Good insurance then, good insurance now. Too bad superficial officials won't learn the history of their own country and profit from it.

What's Your Hurry?

By NELSON HARDING

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

The Business of Service

"SERVICE" . . . our most popular 20th century slogan.

What lovely things we say about it . . . and how mad we get when the lovely things don't come true.

"Look at all we did for those bums," we rave, "and what good did it do? They are right back where they were before."

But were we really doing things for "those bums" . . . or were we doing them for ourselves, to gratify our own ego and our will-to-power?

Elsie Robinson

Sometimes, of course, service is really disinterested. Sometimes we do things from sheer love of decency and pity for our unfortunate fellow man. And when such motives lie behind our service, "virtue is its own reward." Regardless of what the other fellow may do—and he usually does plenty—we have the warming assurance that we have acted as Regular Eggs. We expect no gratitude. We are not insulted if our good gifts are wasted and our excellent advice alighted. Such are the perils of philanthropy, but the game is worth the price.

Yes, sometimes Service is as fine as that. But many a time it isn't!

It's so easy to kid ourselves into thinking we are Being Big-hearted . . . that we are doing it all for the other fellow's sake . . . that we don't want any praise or publicity. And all the time we're getting a big bang out of BATTING FOR GOD and helping Him put His earth in order.

Of course, we're sorry for the unfortunates we help. Stupid, shiftless things—what a mess they've made of their lives! But, on the other hand, how comforting it is to think of our own superior wisdom and strength. And what a nice, exciting, bossy time we're going to have, fixing them over to suit our notion.

For a while all goes well. Then presently something happens. Maybe we get fed up with the other fellow. Maybe he gets fed up with us. In either case the big act flops. And forthwith we blow up. Rave about man's ingratitude. If he only had done as we said——. That's all the thanks you get for trying to help anyone——.

But the plain truth is that we weren't half as much interested in helping him as we were in handing ourself a thrill. And now we're mad because we couldn't have our own way and run his life for him.

But we have no right to run the other fellow's life for him, even though we may be infinitely wiser and more capable than he. Each man must grow according to his own nature. Each man must learn through his own experience. And often our mistakes are as necessary for our growth as as our successes. We can and we should offer help when help is needed. But we have no right to demand a mortgage on the other fellow's soul in return for that help.

If you can't undertake service with that understanding, don't try to serve. Take up tap dancing instead.

Tainted Perfume

MONTE CARLO, Aug. 4—This miniature paradise continues a cesspool of European morals. Even the pungent perfume of its beautiful flowers is tainted with the cloying scent of blood, gold and diabolical deceit. The glory is the putrid phosphorescence of humanity's dregs.

It is ever amazing that perhaps the fairest spot in all Europe—for to the eye Monte Carlo is enticingly lovely—should cradle the worst thieves, panderers, harlots, rogues and money lenders to be found on the face of the globe. I am always sorry I came an hour after arriving.

The entire principality, the prince, the bishop, the canons, the soldiery, the police, hotel keepers, cab drivers, waiters and boatmen are banded together in a colossal brigandage to plunder the innocent visitor. And a dozen trains roar in daily to pour out the victims.

It is not decorative fiction that suicides are frequent. During the season there are several weekly but such messy scandal never reaches the outside world. Monte Carlo sees to that. After a heavy loser has shot, poisoned or hung himself his body is whisked away until interest dies down.

At the end of the season—this is official record—suicide victims are packed in cases, weighted and sunk far out at sea between Monte Carlo and Corsica. In 1898 alone 69 bodies were removed at night from secret crevices, towed out and dumped into deep waters.

Monte Carlo's biggest lure is the fable its bank was once broken. This fancy was cabled to all the world and is still believed. Yet it was a press agent trick. The bank has never been broken nor can it ever be broken. Mathematically that would be impossible.

* * *

Despite the off-season, the Casino is not shorn of its witch-like old ladies—the faded "Miss Harriets"—who seem to keep alive solely through the excitement of gambling. Most of them are past 70—one is reputed in her 92d year—every day they are on the fringe of the tables, like vultures coldly eyeing carrion. They are the inveterate students of the "system" and each believes some day she will make a grand killing. Not one ever has. In the end they are shipped to some far-away almshouse.

* * *

Monte Carlo fears—and I wanted to ring the welkin with a cliff echoing "goody, goody"—the coming season. The men and women who frequent its green tables begin to make their reservations at the Hotel de Paris in July. So far reservations at all inns are off 80 per cent, which will bring its tourists down to the lowest number in history. The biggest year it ever had was the boom season of 1929.

* * *

I have seen the wicked Prince of Monaco's oceanic exhibit. Fish are his diversion—suckers especially, which is a cipher in feeble wheezes. I have also watched them shoot clay pigeons and sat along the promenade des Anglais at the 11 o'clock parade. So this afternoon I lolled on the green of a Mediterranean hill and watched sail boats skimming by while Billy was all jittery over the swooping and spiraling gulls, chasing them like a canine clown.

Such forthright novelists as E. Phillips Oppenheim and the late Arnold Bennett glorify Monte Carlo as the rayest playground in the world. Yet so far it has been my dullest day in Europe and for no reason at all I am strangely depressed but I am looking forward to dinner al fresco and a night view of the Corniche road.

* * *

The Grande Corniche—literally the cornice above the Riviera—is a highway of short turns, bird-like swoops and fascinatingly dizzy loops. Seen from the calm water side below the dark glaring mountainside, it looks like fire-flies, trace in a miracle of brightness its irregular course. To me there is something impish about it all—romance flying through the night on wings. twaddle like that.

And glamorous

O, yes, another thing this morning. I lost 175 francs or $11 in five minutes trying to beat one of their absolutely absurd games. They should put a stop to such carrying on.

Europe at Cut Rates!

The proposed cut of 10 to 30 per cent in steamship passenger rates to Europe is of more than passing importance.

Continuance of the depression this summer radically cut into the profitable foreign tourist trade, which had been becoming an increasingly important means of settling international balances of payment.

For example, during 1930, when the tourist trade was still flourishing, expenditures of American visitors overseas amounted to more than one-fourth of the total value represented by our merchandise imports.

As long as the lure of travel persisted, Europe found a way to pay interest on her debts by permitting American tourists to gain visual impressions of art works at the Louvre in Paris, at the Pitti and Uffizzi galleries in Florence, and at the great cathedrals throughout the Continent.

The balance of American tourist expenditures abroad reached a sum THREE TIMES AS LARGE AS THE ALLIED DEBT PAYMENTS TO THE UNITED STATES TREASURY.

In 1929, when war debt payments reached $212,000,000, net tourist spendings amounted to $659,000,000, which, incidentally, were larger than the total interest payments due on long-term private foreign investments held in this country.

In the light of the cold figures, it is apparent that it is more important for Europe to woo back the American tourists than to get a moratorium on war debt payments.

The great steamship companies have been among the chief sufferers from the bear market in transatlantic travel. They have underfaken to limit losses by inaugurating week-end cruises.

It should bring into the group of potential travelers many who hitherto felt that they could not afford the luxury.

Although European travel has received the bulk of the publicity, Canada has quietly taken ever-increasing proportions of the American tourist trade. Motor travel to Canada increased by one-fifth last summer.

To encourage travel at home, the tourist companies have passed along economies which make comparable vacations at least 6 per cent cheaper than a year ago.

No gloom psychology should be allowed to discourage those who are financially able from availing themselves of the joys of tourism.

Just Folks

Turning the Tables

When the world was young and the books were few and tales were simply told,
The children listened with willing ears to the babblings of the old.
Then father or mother could raise a ghost to frighten the kids to bed,
For seldom a child grew wise enough to doubt what his parents said.
So they followed this method for years and years until into this line it grew:
"The bogey man will carry you off if you don't mind what you do."

With threats of ogres and witches wild they frightened it out of him.
With the sweet assurance that if he cried a horrible death he'd die,
For the night was a horrible time to the young in that ignorant long ago.

But it's different now, for the ghosts are gone and the ogres are no more——
It's the old today who sit in fear of the terrible modern lore—
For the youngsters laugh at the fears we raise. If a cautioning word he spoke
They say: "Oh, yeah! We have heard that line, but it's dead as a last month's joke!"
Father and mother are trembling now whenever the youngsters roam,

If we brought out a ghost to frighten them they'd tickle his ribs and ears.
By the ogres of dread our nerves are frayed for most of our time is spent,
Oh! the grown-ups frightened the children once, but it now appears as if

Capital Silhouettes

THE WASHINGTON Board of Health reports that the mosquito has become extinct at the national capital, so that buzzing sound so many of our statesmen hear must be the presidential bee.

* * *

SOL BLOOM reports that the old English town of Washington, in County Durham, is going to have a pageant depicting the surrender of Lord Cornwallis to George. This looks like a deliberate insult to the Lord Cornwallis Sesquicentennial committee. Suppose somebody from Yorktown should happen to drop into that town on that day, how would he feel?

* * *

ONE REASON why they are so pro-British in Yorktown is that down there they think that Lord Cornwallis is the bird who introduced cawn likker in Virginia, thus enabling them to vote the prohibition ticket without damage to their thirsts.
